

Carter gets 45 Missouri delegates

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — "I ask you to commit this party and this country to a better future by being uncommitted and voting that way and just hanging on for a while. We've got a few more weeks yet."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown's words to state Democrats may have given impetus to the move to hold back some of the 17 delegates chosen Saturday from presidential front-runner Jimmy Carter.

But that victory in officially limiting Carter to only 11 of those 17 at-large delegates appeared hollow as the rush of delegates to board the Carter bandwagon continued in this state as elsewhere.

After the more than 800 state party members met this weekend, the Associated Press confirmed that five of the 54 national convention delegates chosen as uncommitted at district meetings last month had formally switched to the former Georgia governor.

And U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, who has led the move for Missouri Democrats to get behind Carter, claimed another uncommitted delegate and one pledged to Washington Sen. Henry Jackson—Alec Bratt of Kansas City—had also moved behind Carter. Bratt denied any switch to Carter.

"We have to deal with reality and the reality is that Carter is probably going to be the nominee," said one of the uncommitted delegates now backing Carter.

With the state's entire 71-member delegation for the nominating convention in New York complete, the AP breakdown of firm delegate support gives Carter 45, Arizona Congressmen Morris Udall and anti-abortion candidate Ellen McCormack, both of whom picked up a delegate from the independent caucus Saturday, four each, Jackson one and the remaining 17 uncommitted. Missouri delegates are not legally bound to vote for their stated preference.

Mrs. McCormack's delegate support in Missouri is the largest in any state. "That's not true," Bratt said of Eagleton's announcement that he had switched to Carter. In earlier interviews, Bratt had indicated he was leaning to Carter.

"I'm still for Jackson and when Jackson releases me I don't have to go for who he says," Bratt said. "I'll go for whoever I want. I'm not obligated to anybody."

Eagleton and other party leaders involved in the controversial endorsement of Carter that left a number of state delegates miffed at the way it was handled urged the convention to unite behind Carter in choosing the final 17 delegates because "nothing can be gained if we delay any longer."

But convention keynote speaker, retiring U.S. Rep. William Hungate of Troy, sounded a different theme even though he was among those calling for selection of Carter delegates last month.

"Diverse opinion is the secret of the Democratic party's strength," said Hungate. "Friends, we have already thrown away better candidates than the Republicans can find."

He predicted there would be different opinions up until the nominating convention, but then added, "When the convention is over let us remember that these are just family fights."

Indicating he felt it would be difficult to overcome Carter, Brown still said he would continue his campaign "for a little while longer until it doesn't make much sense to me."

Senate to vote on tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — With federal income-tax cuts due to expire July 1, the Senate begins voting this week on a massive tax bill that would extend the cuts.

The bill also would limit some of the tax-avoidance schemes available to the wealthy, and create some tax breaks while eliminating others.

The bill consists of up to 1,700 pages and requires a 500-page report to explain. Because of this size, there is growing doubt that Congress can complete action before July 1.

But there is virtually no chance that the lawmakers will allow taxes to go up on that date. Either the tax-cut portion of the bill will be split off and considered separately or the tax-cut extension will be made retroactive to July 1, no matter when it is passed.

If the anti-recession tax cuts enacted last year are allowed to expire, it would mean a $245 tax increase for a family of four earning $6,000 a year; a $204 hike for a couple earning $10,000; a $151 increase for a single person earning $10,000; and $180 for a typical four-member family earning $15,000.

While the Senate concentrates on taxes, the House will work on major appropriation bills this week.

Scheduled for a final House vote today was a bill to raise the national debt ceiling to $700 billion, an increase of $73 billion.

The biggest appropriation bill of all, $106 billion for defense, will be considered by the House on Thursday. Also on the agenda is a $9.5-billion appropriation for public works and $12.5-billion for agriculture programs.

Before beginning the tax debate, the Senate planned to vote today on a bill authorizing $6.7 billion in foreign military aid for the period ending Sept. 30, 1977. The bill also would give Congress greater control over U.S. arms sales abroad.

There is little disagreement between the House and Senate over extending the individual and corporate tax cuts enacted last year.

But the Senate Finance Committee version of the tax bill would be considerably more generous to businesses and wealthy investors than would the measure passed by the House.

Senate liberals are gearing up in an effort to rewrite the Finance Committee's bill to make it more like the House bill. They seek especially to limit the ability of investors to avoid taxation by offsetting such incomes as salaries against losses incurred in such shelters as movies, farming and real estate.

Bicentennial flag presented to Chaffee

CHAFFEE—The City received an American Bicentennial flag in services Saturday, officially inaugurating Chaffee's Bicentennial program.

State Rep. Fred W. DeField of Charleston represented the Missouri American Revolution Bicentennial Commission in making the presentation.

The flag raising was conducted by members of the Chaffee Veterans' of Foreign Wars, post 3127.

Other participants in the ceremonies were: The Musical Patriots, a group of students from the Chaffee High School Band, who provided patriotic music; Chaffee Elks Lodge 1810 exalted ruler Larry G. Dooley, who along with Boy Scouts of Troop 54, presented a tribute to the flags of the nation. Group singing of the National Anthem was led by the Chaffee Girl Scouts.

Jack T. Burnett, chairman of the Chaffee Bicentennial Committee said that starting today, Flag Day, through July 4, the city will pay a 21-day tribute to the nation by flying the different flags of the country.

Reagan forces jubilant

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — "Shades of 1964." That was the way one Disappointed Republican described it after his fellow party members chose 18 of 19 available at-large delegates to support Ronald Reagan at the party's national convention.

The statement, which referred to the party's ill-advised selection 12 years ago of Sen. Barry Goldwater as the GOP standard bearer, came of course from a supporter of President Ford's candidacy.

Reagan forces, meanwhile, were jubilant. They had effectively organized themselves to turn back efforts by Gov. Christopher S. Bond and other party leaders who wanted Missouri to send overwhelming support for Ford to the national convention.

But the efficient organization along with Reagan's personal visit to the state convention in Springfield Saturday was enough, or as Reagan put it later in Los Angeles, "far, far more than we expected."

Only by a very narrow margin did Bond manage to be elected as the sole at-large delegate supporting Ford, and only that as a courtesy to the governor.

The state convention results and those from congressional district meetings gave Reagan a solid majority among Missouri's 49-member delegation to the August convention. The former California governor will have 30 delegates, Ford 16 and three go uncommitted.

But the delegate who compared Reagan with Goldwater was echoing a belief expressed by Bond and other Ford supporters: That with Reagan at the top of the ticket in November, the GOP is vulnerable in Missouri.

After the Missouri results, Reagan said electability will be the key issue in the remaining state conventions "because the other campaign has made that its issue."

"It is the thing that has to be countered—whether I was electable or not in November—and the Missouri convention rejected that," he said.

Generally, the former California governor's support came from the 8th District in central Missouri, the 7th in the southwestern part of the state, the 3rd in south St. Louis city and county and the 10th in southeastern Missouri.

Firemen make 3 trips

Firemen made three trips Saturday to the Howard Overton home, 411 Jackson St., to extinguish stubborn fires.

Firemen were first called at 3:04 a.m. when a fire broke out in the kitchen of the small frame home. The fire gutted the house before being extinguished.

At 5:31 a.m. firemen were called to extinguish a flare up in the house. At 6:07 p.m. they returned to extinguish a mattress which had begun smoldering.

Chief Crump estimated the damage to the building at $350 and said the State Fire Marshal's office will investigate the possibility of arson.

Sikeston man hurt in crash

Luther Green, 24, of 833 Ruth St., received minor injuries at 12:01 a.m. Saturday when his motorcycle collided with an automobile in the 800 block of East Malone Ave.

Green was treated in the emergency room of Missouri Delta Community Hospital for multiple scratches and released.

Police said Green was east-bound on Malone Ave. when he struck a car driven by Robert Shannon Jr., 51, of 105 Alabama St., who was making a left turn from the westbound lane into the Missouri Men's Club parking lot.

Police said Shannon was arrested for driving while intoxicated.

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — For the first time in six years, former Missouri Gov. Warren Hearnes is not a member of the Democratic National Committee.

Hearnes' re-election bid at the party's state convention here Saturday was defeated, largely through the efforts of Sen. Thomas Eagleton.

The senator and other party leaders had asked that Hearnes be excluded from the slate this year to avoid irritating Hearnes' opponents for the party nomination for the other Senate seat.

But state Sen. Robert Young, D-St. Ann, put the former governor's name in nomination for the national committeeman post, saying it was unfair to prevent Hearnes from keeping the job solely because he is a candidate for a public office.

Warren Hearnes

But instead of electing Hearnes, the convention instead elected a slate of committee

Tom Eagleton

members favored by Eagleton. After his defeat, the former governor was quoted as saying there is "a great amount of resentment of Eagleton's dictatorship of the party."

"I knew he was out to ax me," he said.

Eagleton replied that he was "not going to get into any kind of shouting match with Hearnes." He added that because Hearnes is running for the party nomination for the seat of retiring Sen. Stuart Symington, "I'd been led to believe he was not a candidate" for the party job.

Hearnes said, however, that he had been told that "the universal opinion in the party" was against placing any of the Senate candidates on the slate. "But when I got here Friday night, I found out it was not the universal opinion, whatever that is," he said. "So I allowed my name to be placed in nomination."

Jackson motorist killed

Five traffic accidents in the Southeast Missouri over the weekend resulted in one death, moderate injuries to one person and minor injuries to three others.

Matthew Mason Green, 21, of Jackson was killed in a one-car accident at 9:25 p.m. Saturday on Highway 72, four miles west of Jackson.

The highway patrol reported the accident happened when Green, driving west at a high rate of speed, started to round a curve, lost control of his vehicle and struck a telephone pole.

He was pronounced dead at the scene and his body was taken to McCombs Funeral home in Jackson.

A one-vehicle accident at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, one mile east of Lake Wappapello on Route T, resulted in moderate injuries to a passenger, Raymond E. Davis, 26, of Zelma, who was taken to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

The patrol said the car, driven by an unidentified person who left the scene on foot, ran off the right side of the road, struck the end of a culvert and continued several feet before coming to rest in a ditch.

A burning field and smoke was listed as the cause of a two-vehicle accident at 6:15 p.m. Sunday, three miles west of Broseley on a Butler county road.

Debra Ann Griffin, 18, of Broseley received minor injuries in the accident which occurred when Greg J. Carter, 13, of Quin, moved a pickup truck east from a burning field into the path of the Griffin auto, which was west bound. The Griffin woman was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Speed was listed as the cause of a one-car accident at 6:55 p.m. Sunday on route KK, eight-tenths of a mile west of the

Perry-Bollinger County line.

The accident occurred when the driver, Michael Edward Schwent, 16, of Perryville Route One, traveling west at a high rate of speed, was unable to make a curve, causing the car to travel off the southside of the highway and overturn, coming to rest on the roof of the vehicle.

Schwent was taken to Perry County Memorial Hospital with minor injuries.

PRIMARY ROAD

By Howard Flieger

Uncertainties of politics being what they are, it would be silly to try to read a November outcome into the voting patterns shown by the primaries so far.

But they do suggest a few trends that may be significant indicators of the future. Political practices honored by time have been taking a beating this year.

It could be that the American public — thinking ahead of the politicians, as usual — is signaling one of those sharp swings in attitudes about Government and those chosen to direct it that has marked the history of the United States from time to time.

Results of the primaries as a whole to date hint at a new direction.

A few examples —

The way things are going, voters in November are likely to have a choice between moderate-to-conservative candidates in both major parties for the first time in four decades, with no recognized and avowed liberal at the head of either ticket.

At this point, Jimmy Carter of Georgia is far out from among the Democrats. Although he hasn't been too specific, nothing in his campaign so far indicates that his views mesh with those of the Democratic liberals of the past.

The Republican contest lies between a moderate-conservative President, Gerald Ford, and an outspoken conservative, Ronald Reagan of California — with the outcome in doubt.

Candidates who have advocated bigger federal programs of the "New Deal" and "Great Society" varieties have fallen by the wayside — rejected by the voters. Democrat Morris K. Udall of Arizona, who still remains in the race, has proclaimed he is campaigning as a progressive because the designation "liberal" is out of date with the times.

Election returns of the primaries up to the moment no broad-based public support for "antibusiness" measures proposed in Congress, such as those that would break up the major oil companies and multinational firms.

In fact, both Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Ronald Reagan seem to be benefiting from an "Anti-Washington establishment" mood in the country. Each is a relative newcomer to national politics. Neither has ever served in any federal office. Both have progressed in the campaign by criticizing the size, activities and pervasiveness of the present Washington bureaucracy.

It is possible that a popular sentiment in the country is typified in this observation by a seasoned political observer:

"The people in both parties who have been running things in Washington for the past 25 years or so have made a mess of it, so why not let someone else have a chance?"

That is a modern application of the old "time for a change" theme that has marked American politics of all levels at turning points of the past.

Here are a couple of other things:

If Jimmy Carter is the Democratic nominee, it will be the first time that party has chosen a standard-bearer from the States of the Confederacy who did not move up from the Vice Presidency since James K. Polk of Tennessee in 1844. (Woodrow Wilson was born in Virginia, but went to the White House from the Governorship of New Jersey.)

If Gerald Ford fails to win nomination, it will be only the second time in the history of his party that Republicans have rejected an incumbent President. (It happened to Chester A. Arthur in 1884.)

This year, the character image projected by the presidential nominees may be more important than the issues — probably one reason there have been so few major policy speeches. This is called the "faith and confidence" factor.

As one pollster put it recently: "People are paying no attention to political promises. They are looking for someone they can trust."

DIAL-QUESTION FOR DEAF

On the subject of the telephone's 100th anniversary, it is fitting to note that one of the latest uses of this invention is of direct benefit to those who cannot hear. Alexander Graham Bell, we sometimes forget, was a teacher of the deaf.

International Correspondence Schools (ICS) recently inaugurated a "Dial-A-Question" service to enable its deaf students around the country to communicate directly with their instructors in Scranton, Pa.

The basis for the service is an acoustic telephone coupler — TTY — used in conjunction with a teletypewriter. The student sets his telephone receiver into the coupler, dials a toll-free number and types out his message, which is received on another teletypewriter at the other end. After the answer to his question is obtained, it is transmitted back over the same system.

Currently, there are more than 12,000 TTY stations throughout the U.S. and Canada, including hundreds available through organizations serving the deaf. Primary use of the TTY system has been for emergency communications. The ICS innovation is the first time it has been used on a national scale for educational purposes.

A MONTH OF PERFECT DAYS?

SO THIS is June. Now if ever come perfect days, the poet tells us. Well, some perfect days, perhaps. But as we already have seen, it also can be a month of cool and rainy days. Be patient with them.

Before the 30 days are out the sun will be pushing the growth of soybeans and sunflowers and drawing up the early season moisture into long-stemmed grasses that need more frequent mowings.

No other month—not even December—enjoys greater popularity than June. It is the time kids get out of school and parents year for the pleasures of a vacation at the beach or maybe in a cool northern woods. It is a time for brides and the beginning of a profusion of blossoms from annual flowers. It is a time when we can expect to begin the first haying of the season, and perhaps enjoy an ice cream social at a country church.

Why is it called June? Some say it was named by the Romans in honor of Juno, goddess of the female of the species who was the great queen of the gods and the patron saint of marriage, geese and cuckoos.

But such things are not ever really certain. There are other historians who claim the month is named for the "juniores" because in early Roman times this season was dedicated especially to young men fated for matrimony.

Well, whatever its origin, it is a good month. Warm enough to be at least a solid promise of summer and yet only a preview of the swelter that lies ahead. Go swimming, swing a hammock between two stout trees and take a long nap, have a tall, cool drink. Enjoy it all while you can. Commercial Appeal

INTELLIGENCE BY THE NUMBERS

An intriguing new element has been added to the old controversy over nature vs. nurture, or heredity vs. environment:

Intelligence does not depend upon genetics or race or class or income but rather upon the number of children in a family and how closely or far apart they are spaced in age.

This is the theory of University of Michigan psychologist Robert B. Zajonc, who bases it chiefly on an analysis of the recent steady decline in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores of high school seniors—a decline which has aroused so much concern and disputation among parents and educators.

Zajonc found that the drop in SAT scores, which began about

12 years ago, was a direct reflection of the baby boom of the 1960s, when people began having more children and having them closer together. Comparisons of birth rates and standard IQ scores in other countries revealed the same phenomenon.

According to Zajonc's theory, a child's rate of mental development is influenced by the amount of adult knowledge available to him and grows more rapidly when parental knowledge is not "diluted" by the presence of other children.

For instance, using the figure of 30 as the intellectual level of each adult parent and zero for a new-born child, the mental quotient of the family is a total of 60 divided by three, or 20. But if a second child is born when the first child's level has reached, say, only about eight, the family's mental quotient drops to 17 (68 divided by four).

On the other hand, if a second child is not born until the first has reached near-adult level, the second child will benefit from a richer intellectual environment than an only child has. Zajonc's theory not only explains the decline in SAT scores but differences in the IQ scores of white and black children. The average white family has fewer children and tends to space them farther apart. Black families are more likely to have their children close together, and also more black families are headed by only one parent.

On the same evidence, Jewish children tend to score disproportionately well on intelligence tests because they not only come from smaller families but ones where both parents are more likely to be present because of a low divorce rate.

The theory has engendered as much controversy as that over SAT scores, if only because it jars a lot of preconceptions and steps on a lot of vested educational and sociological interests. And as Zajonc himself admits, there are all kinds of exceptions, as well as other family values to consider. Benjamin Franklin, who was not exactly a dull boy, was the eighth of 10 children. There is also a certain arbitrariness in assigning each parent an equal intellectual level.

Nevertheless, the birth-rate-test-score evidence remains compelling, and on the basis of it Zajonc predicts that SAT scores will halt their decline by 1990 and begin climbing again as a result of the falling birth rate that began in the early 1960s. Already, tests in some states show that children born in 1963 and who are now in junior high school are scoring better than children from the larger families of the 1950s.

Even if Zajonc's prediction comes true, however, it will not prove the validity of his theory. Just as any number of reasons have been offered for the decline in SATs—from too much television to too much permissiveness, from bad teaching to crowded classrooms—can be sure that everybody is going to get into the act to explain or take credit for the turnaround in SAT scores if they do turn around.

JUSTICE DOESN'T NEED A GAG RULE

Where does the First Amendment right of a free press end and a defendant's right to a fair trial begin?

This is the central question involved in the alarming increase in the use of pretrial "gag" orders—alarming, certainly, to the journalism profession, which has carried the issue up to the highest level of the nation's judicial system.

The whole controversy, however, may be based on a misconception, thinks one jurist. It is a misconception indulged in not only by judges and prosecutors but fostered by journalists themselves, and that is the impact of news on the public at large.

Addressing the recent annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, William J. Bauer, judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Chicago, told the editors some things that were both unsettling and comforting.

"I suggest," he said, "that one of the things that you have fostered, because you have some such a superb job of reporting, editing and publishing, is to think that you really influence people. And that four days after they read the story, they remember the first thing about it."

But the fact that this judge discovered in trying highly publicized cases which had been in the headlines for weeks or months before the trial was that when prospective jurors were questioned, 94 per cent by actual count said they could not remember reading anything about the case.

The other six per cent remembered vaguely that they had read something about it, but only about one-half of one per cent remembered what they had read and less than half of these had made up their minds as a result of what they had read.

In other words, there is more than a little truth to the old saying that nothing is deader than yesterday's news. This may be less than inspirational to those who labor to bring today's news to the public, but it does serve to put the gag-rule controversy into better perspective.

THE FREEDOM FIGHTERS

Because they know it's impossible to defend a system which permits the firing of wage-earners for refusing to support an unwanted labor organization, union professionals dutifully avoid any direct confrontation with the moral implications of compulsory unionism.

One of their favorite ploys is to insinuate that the Right to Work movement is a plot of Big Business, thereby hoping to discredit those who place individual freedom above trade union power.

Meanwhile, compulsory unionism brings misery and suffering to hundreds, if not thousands, of Americans each year, and denies millions of Americans their basic Constitutional rights.

As evidence of just how phony the union bosses' claims are, I want to introduce just a few of the dozens of freedom fighters who were privileged to meet during a recent meeting in Washington.

Terry T. Campo is an American Studies major at Millikin University. While in high school Terry was an Illinois State Scholar, and a representative to the Illinois YMCA Youth Legislature, where he authored and successfully co-sponsored the Employees Freedom of Choice Act, a Right to Work bill. He is now pushing for enactment of a federal law which would exempt students from the forced unionism provisions of federal law.

Paul H. Robertson, who hails from Salt Lake City, and Carl A. Coates, from Rock Springs, Wyoming, are experienced journeymen electricians who were employed by the Bechtel Power Corporation at its Jim Bridger Power project in Wyoming. In December 1974, Bechtel reduced its work force and agreed to demand by officials of IBEW Local 322 that persons not hired through the union be laid-off first, regardless of experience or qualifications. Robertson and Coates were two of those whose jobs were taken away because they weren't union members.

Albert M. Holmquist was a teacher in the Madison, Wisconsin, school system in 1971, when a contract was being negotiated between the School Board and the teachers' union. During the "negotiations," Holmquist appeared at a public session of the School Board to present a petition signed by many of the teachers asking the Board to delay implementing a so-called "fair share" agreement, which required the forced payment of union dues.

Union officials protested, and Wisconsin courts have ruled that Holmquist's exercise of his constitutional right of free speech was unlawful, since only the union was empowered by law to "represent" the views of Madison teachers. His case is on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

A non-union construction equipment operator, Samuel Kirkland refused to leave his job when he was ordered to by union officials. His stubborn refusal to turn tail and run earned him a brutal beating when a group of union commandos attacked the Marco Island, Florida, job site where he was employed. The union assailants—five of whom were convicted and jailed—also threatened to cut off his arms. And all because he dared exercise his Right to Work without joining their union.

A classroom teacher in Vermillion, Ohio, Jo Ann Seker went before her state legislature to explain her views. "Allow us to make our own professional decisions, as an example to our students that this, their country and mine and yours, not only allows, but welcomes diversity of opinion, individual integrity, and freedom of choice."

This, my friends, is what Right to Work is all about. These are the real freedom fighters.

Punishing Moonlighting: Auto Workers Targeting Ford (Motors) For Historic Remaking of Nation's Work Week

NEW YORK — Absolutely, it didn't take any deep-throated source to convince me that the upcoming July 12 Democratic National Convention here will be shorter than Elizabeth Taylor's play. Just look at the travel arrangements Jimmy Carter's man in labor, auto workers president Leonard Woodcock, is making for a quick departure to Detroit, so he can launch the second most significant domestic story of the year.

On Monday, July 19, he begins three successive days of presentation of UAW's 1976 demands to the Big Three car manufacturers. First up is General Motors; then Ford, and third Chrysler, USA. Basically these are uniform demands. Then each group breaks up into intense bargaining conferences—which could well wind up in a strike of one of the corporations over some special issue.

At first we insiders believed the big story would involve Chrysler, USA because its subsidiary, Chrysler United Kingdom, last August (though unpublished in America) had offered not only to place two British union chiefs on its board of directors but to open all its books, records, and policymaking procedures to the UK's union officialdom and rank and file all the way down the line.

Then it was revealed that UAW vice president Doug Fraser, leader of the U.S. Chrysler workers, would ask Chrysler USA for exactly what was offered by Chrysler UK to its employees. Fraser told me he'd accept the British Chrysler document, "typographical errors and all."

"What is good enough for Chrysler is good enough for them to offer us," Fraser told me during a phone conversation.

In a few words, Chrysler's Aug. 7, 1975, "Employee Participation Programme" opens "all of its activities" to the British labor leadership.

This is the phenomenon of worker decision making development now enveloping much of the free world—especially Germany and Sweden where it's rolling into worker-ownership. Thus as it heats up here, it could become the searing breakthrough—especially since some scholars now believe there are enough billion-dollar worker pension funds to buy up control of much of American industry.

But there isn't much unanimity inside the $213.1 million UAW's high command over this issue. Labor solidarity, yes. Unity on becoming part of management, no.

To me, this portends a hotter issue elsewhere on the auto negotiating front. This union is powerful, what with a strike fund now topping $170 million and a per capita dues income of $118 million annually. So where it strikes for new breakthroughs it will make the big breaking news, presidential election or not.

For this some insiders look to the Ford Motor Co. arena.

Here you run into the veteran pile-driving UAW vice president Ken Bannan. He says he'd rather confront Henry Ford (who has publicly, angrily condemned German co-determination, or co-management) on a high wage-fringe package than on the concept of getting two UAW representatives on Ford's board of directors.

Mark well a new principle breakthrough Bannan has in mind. This could change the broad sweep of American industrial life just as the UAW's first pension retirement plans have. Back in 1949, the UAW broke through on this front with a contract calling for a meager $100 a month retirement pension. One had to be 30 years on the job to get it. And it included Social Security.

Today UAW contracts call for up to $1000 monthly retirement pay with Social Security included. But the miniature pension of 27 years ago carried with it three unprecedented prime principles: the pensions were noncontributory on the workers' part, meaning the company agreed to pay for all of it. The program was funded. And it was jointly administered. In the following decades, as auto went so went the nation.

Now Ken Bannan says: "We're looking for new principles to provide job security—spreading the work."

One way to assure this, says he, is to create a shorter work week beginning this year.

"We don't want any overtime. We are talking about shorter work time. Bonus time off. Give the workers more leisure."

"We must put a penalty on moonlighting. Otherwise it defeats our purpose of leisure activity. They must take it in lumps, not in pieces, etc. Or an hour here and there."

Bannan says the language can be written so that the auto workers don't sop up jobs in other industries and do get in their leisure time. He says there is a great new principle involved here. Perhaps a shortened work-week, work-month, mini-sabbaticals. It could start in almost any fashion. Just as did the 1949 $100-a-month pension. Or it could go to weeks-on and weeks-off.

And the old weeks schedule would be as rare as a barber pole.

Again remember, as auto goes so goes the nation's industry.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Jack Anderson

More on Ray-Hays Daze

By JACK ANDERSON with LESS WHITTEN

WASHINGTON—There is more to the celebrated Wayne Hays-Elizabeth Ray affair than the bosomy blonde has revealed.

Sources close to the notorious pair say the strip-and-tell mistress was in love with Hays. It was primarily jealousy over his marriage to another woman, Pat Peak, that provoked Ray into baring her two-year affair with the powerful Ohio Congressman, the sources say.

Bitterly, she charged that Hays' advances had compelled her to consult a psychiatrist, that she was revulsed at having sexual relations with the 65-year-old Hays.

But her friends say she told them quite a different story. Although the relationship was an emotional roller-coaster ride for Ray, she spoke of the gruff Hays as an inwardly sensitive man for whom she felt a deep affection. She told friends, indeed, that Hays was the "best" lover she'd ever had.

After she burst her bombshell, we have learned, it almost wrecked Hays' marriage. For several days, his new bride refused to speak to him.

At first, the old curmudgeon turned his back on his Washington troubles and concentrated on saving his brief marriage. To spare his bride further anguish, he told friends, "I would put a bullet through my head." Added the broken Hays meaningfully: "And I've got the guts to do it."

We got the first inkling of the torrid Ray-Hays romance more than two years ago when Elizabeth Ray called our office in a hysterical crying fit. Between sobs, she blurted that she was about to lose her Capitol Hill job because she "would not go to bed with Wayne Hays."

Our associates Bob Owens and Jack Cloherty hurried up to Capitol Hill to see her. But by the time they reached her, she had changed her story. She wanted our reporters to forget about the call.

But that wasn't the last time we heard from Liz Ray. She called our office repeatedly. We found her erratic, unreliable and unpredictable. We concluded that her outburst against Hays had resulted from a lovers' quarrel, that her attitude toward him fluctuated with the status of their romance, and that the two of them were exploiting one another. But there was no way we could base a story, we decided, upon her statements.

She also boasted of relationships, we learned, of such prominent Washington figures as Senators Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and John Culver, D-Iowa.

In each case, she used Hays' name to reach the Senator on the phone. She would engage the Senator in an aimless conversation, then would keep calling back. Most of her calls were never returned.

Some of the Senators now believe she had a purpose for the calls. They suspect she taped them in order to prove she had a speaking acquaintance with them. This now gives credibility to the paperback potboiler she began preparing a year ago.

Sources close to Hays say he tried to break off the relationship with the shapely blonde some time ago. He knew she was dating several other men and regarded her as too promiscuous. He was also afraid that she would disclose the affair if he ended it.

Shortly after his divorce, he had dinner with Ray at Washington's fashionable Paul Young's restaurant. He chided her for not working hard enough. Later, according to witnesses, she asked Hays why he wouldn't marry her. Once she left the table to go to the rest room, she sashayed across the restaurant, tossing her hips in an exhibition of what she herself calls her "Walk."

She stopped at another table to engage a prominent Washington lawyer in conversation. Hays gestured toward the scene and remarked to the others at his table: "That's why I can't marry her."

There were times, according to our sources, when the temperamental Ray would threaten to cause a scene in Hays' office unless he went out with her. The biggest blowout occurred after a heated argument about Hays' impending marriage. The Capitol Police were summoned to remove Ray from Hays' office. Not long afterward, she told her

Recycle draperies with bright ribbon

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — When we bought our house two years ago, expensive plain dark blue draperies were hanging at the picture windows. I am tired of looking at them and would like to brighten the room, but cannot afford new draperies. Any suggestions as to what I might do. —RENEE.

DEAR RENEE — You might add one and a half inch bands (or even wider) of fabric in a contrasting color that looks well in the room down the inside edges (about an inch from the edges) and across the bottoms (along top of the hems). That would give the room a lift. Even three rows of grossgrain ribbon in different colors and slightly separated would look well applied the same way. Any decorative braid or short fringe could also be used. Do be sure what you use is really going to show and add color. —POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — We recently moved into a new home. Prior to moving, when I took down the pictures on the walls, I scotch taped the hooks to the backs of the pictures that hung on them. This saved a lot of time and looking around when I was ready to rehang the pictures in our new home. —MRS. A.J.L.

DEAR POLLY — My Pet Peeve is with the auto manufacturers who use such durable materials for the interiors of cars and then the exteriors rust away. It seems they could put more into the exteriors.

Also, I am peeved with the flimsy paper used to make vacuum cleaner bags. It just does not last. —D.L.T.

Not so happily ever after-

Former queen seeks citizenship again

WASHINGTON (AP) — As in a fairy tale, the beautiful American girl fell in love with a handsome prince, married him and went to live in his mountain kingdom. But they didn't live happily ever after.

The fairy tale became a nightmare for Hope Cooke Namgyal, the New York socialite who became queen of the Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim 11 years ago. Her problems still aren't over.

Mrs. Namgyal left Sikkim three years ago with her two children after her husband, Palden Thondup Namgyal, turned over most of his government administration to India following a revolt against his rule.

For the past year, the 35-year-old former queen has been trying to persuade Congress to restore her American citizenship. But the attempt has proven futile.

Several members of the House immigration, citizenship and international law subcommittee were offended that she voluntarily renounced her citizenship to marry the king.

As a result of their opposition, Congress refused to grant her full citizenship, instead passing a bill to give her permanent residency.

As a permanent resident, she will have to wait five years before becoming a citizen, but the congressional action does prevent her deportation to Sikkim.

The private relief bill, approved last month, has been sent to President Ford for his signature, expected this week.

Mrs. Namgyal, living in New York with her children, has refused to talk to reporters. But in a statement to Congress supporting her request for citizenship, she described her last days in Sikkim.

"Life became hell," she said, adding she feared for her children's lives.

The shy, soft-spoken American married the then crown prince of Sikkim, a mountain kingdom tucked between China and India, in 1963. She became gyalmo (queen) in 1965, at Namgyal's coronation as chogyal (king).

"By Sikkimese law, I had to give up my American citizenship," she said in the statement. But she also felt an obligation to show the Sikkimese she was not an 'American arm' in the Himalayas," she said.

At first, life was idyllic. She became deeply involved in Sikkimese life, working to improve the educational system and to encourage the export of handicrafts. She gave birth to a son in 1964 and a daughter in 1968.

"To live in Sikkim was to be part of a wonderfully woven group — everyone shared and participated," she said. "The palace, which was small, was open to anyone who came. And people did come freely all the time — to sit, talk, eat and simply be together."

But in April 1973, a revolt began with a feud between the king and a wealthy landlord who had campaigned for reduction of the monarch's powers and had widespread support. The people resented the queen's 'American background.'

"Day by day, life deteriorated from 1973 on," she said. "My children, who had once run through town and countryside free as urchins were suddenly faced with ongoing physical danger."

Before his wife left the country, the king turned over most of the internal administration to the Indian government. In April 1975, he was deposed, and he remains under house arrest. Sikkim has been annexed as a state of India.

By living in the United States, Mrs. Namgyal said, she hoped to "make a small, durable life for myself and children and to reinstall in them some measure of hope, confidence and idealism."

Although she said that giving up her citizenship had been "one of my greatest sacrifices," the House immigration subcommittee, which deals with

Foliage flourishes with tender care

by Charles Marden Fitch

Tropical jungles are famous for tangles of lush foliage, twining vines, an abundant display in many shades of green. Our homes are often decorated with species from humid tropical habitats, but with a reduced residence. You can increase the health and attractiveness of your foliage plants by recalling what occurs in their original tropical homes.

Almost every day some rain falls. During my last trip through the Amazon jungles of Colombia, Peru, and Brazil I found many philodendrons, bromeliads, marantas, and forest floor foliage favorites washed to glossy perfection by warm daily rains. Even during the dry season there is enough rainfall to keep foliage clean, in habitats that favor foliage plant species.

In my home the plant collection ferns, philodendrons, even fuzzy-leaved episcias are kept lovely by a monthly shower of lukewarm water. I bring plants to the bathroom sink and use a sprinkler for quick cleaning. After an hour or so, the foliage dries and I place plants in their decorative positions around the house.

Leaves on greenhouse or tile floored sunroom plants are even easier to keep clean. Just have a hot-cold water mixer attached to the hose line so water comes out lukewarm. With no danger from overly hot or cold water you can mist and sprinkle leaves every sunny morning.

Just be sure foliage has time to dry before nighttime, to discourage fungus attacks.

Diffuse light, humidity 40 to 60 per cent, and a temperature between 65 and 75 degree F are suitable conditions for the popular foliage plants. As with flowering plants it is best to have night temperatures 8 to 10 degrees cooler than daytime highs. Grow plants in well drained containers with one of the custom formulated houseplant mixes that come pasteurized. For display you can always place drained containers inside of decorative solid bottomed pots but use care that water doesn't accumulate round the roots.

Summer air conditioning won't harm foliage so long as cold air doesn't blow directly at the plants, and humidity remains 40 percent or higher.

Even with the perfect environment, plants still need fertilizer for complete health. To produce the best leaves, adequate nitrogen is especially important. I like a general purpose timed released product which releases nutrients with every watering, for up to four months. During the peak growing season I supplement the slow release formula with a weak dilution of fish emulsion (5-1-1), an organic fertilizer high in nitrogen. Dilute fish emulsion in warm water, spray on the leaves or pour around the roots.

Printer sets sail for Italy

BOSTON AP—An Italian-born printer who refused to let his dream boat turn into a nightmare, was on the high seas today, enroute to fulfill a lifelong dream to sail back to his homeland.

"Something like this happens only once in a lifetime," said Andrea Pertot, 54-year-old Revere printer. He set sail Saturday in the 44-foot ketch he laboriously spent nine years building.

A squadron of well-wishers escorted the two-masted vessel out of Boston Harbor. Aboard were Pertot and his three crew members.

"Today is my day, the proudest moment of my life," Pertot said. Two years ago he had the ketch almost completed, but vandals broke in, set it afire, and destroyed the cabin area.

But, Pertot said then, "It has become a part of my life. I can't quit on her now." And he doggedly went back to rebuild the boat he named for his wife, Gloria.

He hopes to arrive at Rome next month and, in about 30 days, to be at Trieste, where he intends to spend his retirement years. His wife will fly to Italy and sail the final leg with him.

Ann Landers

Cross words for puzzle nut

Dear Ann Landers: My husband is a crossword puzzle nut. Ed claims it's his major source of relaxation and he's a real whiz. His brother tells everybody Ed is so good he only needs to work them horizontally.

I don't mind Ed doing crosswords when we go to a restaurant for dinner by ourselves because I enjoy them, too. But when we have another couple or two along, I'm embarrassed. There I sit, trying to converse with our guests (or hosts) while Ed has his nose buried in his newspaper, avidly filling in words.

If anyone mentions it, Ed says he can concentrate on more than one thing at a time and that he hasn't missed a word of the conversation. Occasionally he looks up to ask if anyone knows a five-letter word for an African nit. What do you have to say about such crude and insensitive behavior? — Puzzled In Pawtucket

Dear P.: Tell Ed a crossword is O.K. when he's alone or with you, but when others are present "Paw" should tuck it in his pocket.

It's insulting to give friends the impression that their company is so inadequate that he needs outside entertainment to protect himself against boredom.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents were from the old school and believed an unmarried woman who didn't live at home was "up to no good."

I am 31, single and lived with my parents until I was 29. After three years of hassling and much soul-searching I moved to my own apartment. My parents were very upset but I made the break anyway. Mother finally accepted it and even helped set up my apartment. But Father never let me forget I went against his wishes.

Mom passed away in January. I invited my father to stay with me "for a few weeks." Well, it's been three months now and all I hear from him is, "Move back home and live with me."

The thought of it makes me sick. I've become accustomed to coming and going as I please. The guilt feelings are enormous but it took so long to win my independence I hate to give it up.

Help me, Ann, I need your advice. — Truly Torn

Dear Torn: If you don't hold your ground now you'll be stuck in your father's home as long as he lives. You have earned your freedom and independence. I urge you to MAINTAIN IT or you'll rue the day.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you had a letter from a woman who was terribly annoyed by a close friend who habitually telephoned her while she was eating. This friend was always crunching, chewing (sounded like celery) and as barely able to make herself understood because her mouth was full of food.

I have a similar problem. It's my husband. He insists on taking the phone to the dinner table and making business calls throughout the meal. Dinner time is actually the only opportunity the children have to talk to their father. I'm sure they resent his blocking them out, and so do I.

I've told him how I feel but he continues with this despicable habit. Last night he put it bluntly, "You run the house and let me run my business." What can I do about it? — Blocked Out

Dear Blocked: Probably very little — except to engage the children in conversation and try to divert their attention from the ultimate rejection.

A man who can't spare 25 minutes a day to converse with his children is in bigger trouble than he realizes. In a few years he should not be surprised when they have absolutely nothing to say to him.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teenage Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

WANTED: Pitchers who can throw strikes consistently with velocity and location enough to at least slow down the rampaging Bi-State League batters when they play the Sikeston Saints. Contact anyone connected with the team.

It happened again to the snake-bitten newest member of the Bi-State League on Sunday. The Sikeston Saints traveled to Ste. Genevieve, winless in league games, and lost. No, make that got stomped, 13-5.

"We weren't very fair to Jethro," said manager Tom Masterson after the game. "He didn't get any warning and wasn't prepared."

Starting hurler Jeff "Jethro" Jackson hadn't thrown in more than three weeks and was understandably wild and easy to hit when he was forced to be a last-minute replacement for scheduled starter Mike Cooksey.

Cooksey, a resident of Dexter, never showed for the departure of the team Sunday morning and that put the Sikeston team in dire straits.

Operating with a "now you pitch" philosophy, the Sikeston coaches were forced to sit through a three-and-a-half hour, 13 walk and 14 hits marathon that never gave the Sikeston hitters a chance.

"We've scored 36 runs in six games," noted a team member. "That ought to be enough to win more than once."

But, a 1-5 record is just what the struggling team has after Sunday's debacle.

Collegiate players Grant Dambach and Rick Eisenbach joined the lineup for a full game for the first time and both played well. Eisenbach was 3-for-4 with a long homer and two rbi's. Dambach hit the ball extremely well despite going on-for-5. He was, however, the middleman on a lightning-quick, 6-4-3 doubleplay in the second inning and lent a steadiness to the Sikeston infield that led Masterson to enthuse, "Our infield is as good as any we've seen this year."

Sikeston reached Ste. Genevieve starter Dan Beastings and his reliever Del

Chase for ten hits and five runs during the game. Leftfielder Kenny Urhnah collected two hits, as did first-time catcher Mitch Walker. Stan Hall belted a double.

"We've just gotta find a pitcher somewhere," moaned the Saints' manager after the game, citing the team's obvious and most pressing problem. "It can't just be anybody, because these Bi-State batters are extra-tough."

The Saints manager stressed that he wasn't meaning to cut down or criticize the hurlers that have worked for the team this year, but 52 walks and 64 runs in six games bear out his team's pressing need.

"We still feel our eight starters, and our bench, are as good as anybody's. If we find a consistent hurler or two, look out. Those playoffs still aren't out of reach."

The Saints next game is a home encounter Wednesday night at 7 p.m. in V.F.W. Stadium against the St. Louis Saints, a travelling team of excellent college players from the metro area.

NBA considers ABA's request for expansion

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — National Basketball Association owners were pondering today whether to admit four, five, six — or no — American Basketball Association teams for the 1976-77 season.

In an attempt to end pro basketball's costly war that has existed since the formation of the ABA in 1967, the NBA's top brass, headed by Commissioner Larry O'Brien, invited the younger league's leaders, including Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, to their annual summer meeting.

Under the four-team package, the NBA would take in Denver, Indiana, New York and San Antonio. If the five-team plan was accepted, Utah would be the added club. And should the NBA decide to increase its membership from 18 teams to 24, then Kentucky would be the other club.

That would mean the entire ABA — or what was left from the league which began with 10 franchises last season — would join the NBA, giving the 30-year-old league its largest enrollment in history.

O'Brien and his five-man merger committee were studying all aspects of the complicated plans today before submitting their suggestions to the 18-man Board of Governors for a vote. The decision was expected to be announced Tuesday, with 14 votes needed for passage.

"There are so many facets to the plans," said Mike Burke, president of the New York Knicks and a member of the merger committee. "The issues are players, politics, financial, legal and competitive, and they are so intertwined that none of the plans can be approached in a simplistic manner."

Ironically, it is the ABA which has submitted the plans, and it is the ABA's Players Association which could block some aspects of them.

The players' group would fight back, however, only if all six ABA teams were not included in the so-called merger agreement.

If four teams were accepted, each would be charged an initial fee of $4.5 million to be paid over five years.

Royals' trade for Ken Holtzman falls through

KANSAS CITY (AP) — You can add Ken Holtzman to the list of pitchers who are not coming to the Kansas City Royals.

The Royals said late Sunday that they had ended trade talks with the Baltimore Orioles concerning Holtzman because of an inability to sign him.

The announcement came after Kansas City General Manager Joe Burke discussed an agreement with the Orioles in which Holtzman would join the Royals — but only if he signed a contract. "Joe talked to the Orioles, he talked to Holtzman's manager and he talked to Holtzman," said Dean Vogelaar, a Royals spokesman. "But no agreement was reached and the deal fell through. There will be no trade for Holtzman."

Burke, who earlier expressed confidence that the trade would be made, explained that negotiations had broken down in areas other than financial terms or contract length.

"In the interest of harmony on our club, I could not agree to some of his requests," Burke said.

Holtzman was the fourth front-line pitcher Kansas City had shown interest in since late 1974 — and the fourth who failed to come to the Royals.

Kansas City reportedly made a multi-million dollar offer to Jim "Catfish" Hunter before he signed with the New York Yankees as a free agent in December 1974. The Royals also made inquiries about free agent Andy Messersmith, who signed with the Atlanta Braves this spring, and Bert Blyleven, who was traded to the Texas Rangers by the Minnesota Twins earlier this month.

Rumors of a Baltimore-Kansas City swap began here early Sunday after Holtzman was yanked from a scheduled start against the Royals and the Orioles said he would be traded to an unnamed American League team.

Tyson's bat helps Cardinals salvage split with Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan says Mel Ott's 47-year-old National League RBI record is safe—for the moment.

"It's not a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Morgan after the St. Louis Cardinals halted his runs batted in binge at 10 games, one short of Ott's record.

"I'm not disappointed. How can I be? With this club, before the season is over I'll get another chance," said Morgan.

Morgan's bid highlighted Sunday's doubleheader split between the Cincinnati Reds and the Cardinals before a sweltering near-capacity crowd of more than 51,000.

St. Louis, after being shut out 4-0 in the opener, bounced back to take the nightcap 12-9 as light-hitting Don Kessinger drove in three runs, including two with his first home run in two years.

Morgan extended his RBI string to 10 straight games in the opener with bases-loaded walk while appearing as a pinch hitter.

Bob Forsch, Mike Wallace and Bill Greif combined to hold Morgan hitless in the second game. Morgan had one last chance in the ninth, with Pete Rose at second, but passed up a high, inside pitch for ball four.

Morgan spun the pitch, saying "I would not do anything to hurt the team." Tony Perez followed with a three-run homer, but the rally came too late for the Reds, who trailed 12-1 at one point.

Morgan, who drove in 17 runs during the 10-game skein, took dead aim at the record earlier. On two occasions he led off an inning and was going for the fences.

"I was trying to jerk one out. That's probably why I didn't get a hit," he said.

Hits were no problem for the Cards in the nightcap.

They raked rookie Santo Alcala and three Cincinnati relievers for 15 safeties, including two-run homers by Kessinger and Lou Brock. Mike Tyson slammed two triples and a double to cap what he called "my best series against Cincinnati."

He had seven hits in 15 at-bats, with six going for extra bases.

"We were overdue. We've been hitting, but we just can't score any runs," said Tyson.

"Maybe our bats are coming around," added Kessinger, whose home run came on a hit-and-run play. "We got 24 runs in four games here and we were shut out in one of them."

St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst saw the four-game split as a good omen. "If we can keep the same lineup healthy—with Reggie Smith at first and Ted Simmons catching—we'll be all right."

Fred Norman and Will McEnaney combined for an eight-hitter in the opener while Bob Bailey supplied the power. Subbing at third for Rose, Bailey drilled a two-run homer to help Fred Norman, 4-1, run his lifetime mark at Riverfront Stadium to 27-6. John Curtis, 4-6, took the loss.

Arizona St. & E. Michigan are unbeaten

By DAN EVEN

Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona and Arizona State are living up to their billing in the 30th College World Series.

After three days of the eight-team, double-elimination tournament top-ranked Arizona State and Eastern Michigan are the only unbeaten — and looming in the wings is Arizona.

"I think it's becoming clear there is a separation between the top teams and the rest," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock after his club knocked off Washington State 9-3 Sunday night.

Brock surely numbers his club in that elite — and although he didn't say it — the only other might be Arizona.

The Sun Devils' victory sent them into a Tuesday night matchup with pitching-rich Eastern Michigan, which advanced by nipping Clemson 3-2 in 10 innings.

Monday night is for survivors in the week-long tournament. Arizona, which came to the series ranked as the Sun Devils' top challenger, is matched against Clemson, 36-14, while Maine, 28-8, tangles with Washington State, 43-14.

"Our margin for error is zero and we're going to play like that the rest of the way," said Arizona Coach Jerry Kindall after his team stayed in the field by ripping Oklahoma 10-2 in a losers' round game.

One more victory probably will earn Arizona, 52-17, another shot at Arizona State. The Sun Devils took a come-from-behind 7-6 victory in 10 innings in their first series matchup with Arizona Saturday night.

"There's a good chance that it could be an all Arizona wrap-up," speculated Brock in looking ahead and seemingly not too worried about Eastern Michigan.

"They (Eastern) have a super pitcher in Bob Owchinko and Bob Welch isn't far from that," said Brock. "They nip away at you like they did Clemson and I'm sure they are a better hitting team than they showed."

Eastern Michigan, 45-14, used Jerry Keller's 10th inning single to edge Clemson after the Tigers had tied the score in the ninth on a two-out, two-strike double by Billy Wingo.

"We played our type of game — good pitching, good defense and good fundamental baseball," said Eastern Coach Ron Oestrike.

Eastern had only six hits — all singles — and all of its runs were scored on set up by bunts. Arizona State, 64-8, was a contrast in winning its 21 straight.

"1776!" STAINLESS by SALEM

The timeless beauty of fine silver — a tradition cherished by the time of the American Revolution. Master silversmiths took painstaking care with every detail to make each piece a masterpiece.

Salem captures this proud tradition in "1776!" silverware. Even at first sight its uncompromising quality is evident. Rich beading around broad, gently-curved handles is an authentic Early-American design. Each piece is finished to perfection with a softly-brushed sheen, and carefully highlighted with deep shadows. All this, plus its solid weight and perfect balance, make... "1776!" a true masterpiece.

Crafted of quality stainless steel, "1776!" needs no special care or storage to protect its beauty, even through daily informal use. The five-piece place setting is beautifully complemented by matching accessory pieces, including: cocktail forks; iced beverage spoons; large serving spoons; sugar shell; butter knife; pierced pastry server; pierced serving spoon; gravy ladle; cold meat fork; deep berry spoon.

Always striking in any setting, for any use. A superior set of stainless... "1776!" by Salem.

Today in U.S. history

By The Associated Press
Today is Monday, June 14th, the 166th day of 1976. There are 200 days left in the year.
Today's highlight in history:
On this date in 1775, the U.S. Army was founded. The Continental Congress authorized the recruiting of 10 companies of riflemen to serve for one year.
On this date:
In 1777, the Continental Congress made the Stars and Stripes the national flag.
In 1846, a group of settlers at Sonoma, Calif., proclaimed the free Republic of California.
In 1922, President Warren G. Harding became the first president to make a radio broadcast. Station WEAR in Baltimore carried a speech the president made at the dedication of the Francis Scott Key memorial at Fort McHenry.
In 1940, the Germans occupied Paris in World War II.
In 1941, President Franklin Roosevelt ordered the freezing of German and Italian assets in the United States.

In 1944, American forces began the Pacific war invasion of Saipan island.

Ten years ago: President Lyndon Johnson signed a bill designed to make Grand Coulee dam on the Columbia river the largest hydroelectric power project in the world.

Five years ago: Seven persons were shot to death in what police described as execution-like slayings in a suspected drug pad in Detroit.

One year ago: The Chrysler corporation announced it would get out of the traditional large car market by 1977.

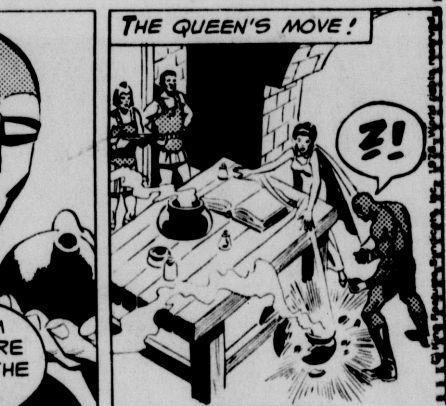

Today's birthdays: Singer and actor Burl Ives is 67 years old. Former Presidential news secretary Pierre Salinger is 51.

Thought for today: I never think of the future. It comes soon enough — physicist Albert Einstein, 1879-1955.

Still in political style

... babies can be a candidate's best friends when a photographer is around — providing they're in the mood to cooperate. Democrat Jimmy Carter's handful seems to have some independent thoughts about their encounter.

And then there's Alabama's Gov. George Wallace, whose well-known ability to hold crowds spellbound doesn't impress this nonvoting citizen.

But never underestimate the power of a woman's touch, as demonstrated by Rosalynn Carter and her contented lapful.

If Dad's a Good Sport His Tie May Show It

A TOPICAL TIE, in this case rowboats and oars in a neat club pattern, can always be found to fit into Dad's interests. The light vest against a gingham patterned shirt is definitely fashionable this year. (From the Men's Tie Foundation.)

NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever the trendy fashion of the moment may be, there is one consistent staple — a man's tie. It reflects his personality, his state of mind, even his profession, and in a manner of speaking his life style, says the head of a tie manufacturing company.

The selection of a man's tie is often dictated by his profession, and just as often by his hobbies — especially if he is a sports buff. The latter might flaunt his sportsmanship by wearing a tie depicting his hobby — tennis, golf, baseball and such. D. Gordon Williams points out.

Doctors, lawyers, executives, stockbrokers and the like tend towards understated patterns and colors. Stripes are the most popular choice, though this does not preclude panels, borders, and under-the-knot-pattern ties for those who like to "dress up" to their profession, according to Williams.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The programs the Democratic party is proposing on welfare, national health insurance and education can be financed without additional cost to the taxpayer if the nation returns to full employment, party officials say.

The party is making full employment the central issue in the campaign platform that its 153-member platform committee was taking up today. A 15-member subcommittee completed work on a proposed draft Sunday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither Democrats nor Republicans have improved their procedures for selecting vice presidential candidates and both parties fail to give the issue enough consideration, Harvard University's Institute of Politics says. "As it is now, both parties treat vice presidential selection as a low-priority matter, an afterthought unworthy of serious preparation."

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is encouraging CB radio operators to organize a nation-wide network of highway safety broadcasters. Sponsors of the program think CBers in emergencies might want to find "smokies" rather than avoid them. The program is being financed by the Transportation Department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI says it had two contacts with Jacques Srouji, a Nashville journalist, shortly before she testified before a House subcommittee investigating nuclear security, according to a well informed source. The FBI is reportedly under investigation by a special Justice Department team looking into the possibility that the bureau attempted to use Mrs. Srouji to manipulate the congressional probe.

WASHINGTON (AP) — With federal income-tax cuts due to expire July 1, the Senate begins voting this week on a massive tax bill that would extend the cuts. The bill also would limit some of the tax-avoidance schemes available to the wealthy and create some tax breaks while eliminating others.

CANTERBURY, Conn. (AP) — A cross-country grave-digging expedition led by a parolee convicted of a sex crime has unearthed another body, the fourth person the man claims to have sexually molested and slain. Authorities said the body of a 21-year-old woman was found Sunday in a grave near a lovers' lane after Robert F. Carr III pointed out the spot. Police said Carr, flown here from Florida where he'd been arrested, was not present during the digging. Authorities there said Carr has told of killing a teen-age girl, two youngsters and the woman here. Last week, he led authorities to graves of a 16-year-old girl and two 11-year-old boys in Louisiana and Mississippi, all from the Miami area.

Carter gets 45 Missouri delegates

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — "I ask you to commit this party and this country to a better future by being uncommitted and voting that way and just hanging on for a while. We've got a few more weeks yet."

California Gov. Edmund G. Brown's words to state Democrats may have given impetus to the move to hold back some of the 17 delegates chosen Saturday from presidential front-runner Jimmy Carter.

But that victory in officially limiting Carter to only 11 of those 17 at-large delegates appeared hollow as the rush of delegates to board the Carter bandwagon continued in this state as elsewhere.

After the more than 800 state party members met this weekend, the Associated Press confirmed that five of the 54 national convention delegates chosen as uncommitted at district meetings last month had formally switched to the former Georgia governor.

And U.S. Sen. Thomas Eagleton, who has led the move for Missouri Democrats to get behind Carter, claimed another uncommitted delegate and one pledged to Washington Sen. Henry Jackson—Aleck Bratt of Kansas City—had also moved behind Carter. Bratt denied any switch to Carter.

"We have to deal with reality and the reality is that Carter is probably going to be the nominee," said one of the uncommitted delegates now backing Carter.

With the state's entire 71-member delegation for the nominating convention in New York complete, the AP breakdown of firm delegate support gives Carter 45, Arizona Congressmen Morris Udall and anti-abortion candidate Ellen McCormack, both of whom picked up a delegate from the independent caucus Saturday, four each, Jackson one and the remaining 17 uncommitted. Missouri delegates are not legally bound to vote for their stated preference.

Mrs. McCormack's delegate support in Missouri is the largest in any state.

"That's not true," Bratt said of Eagleton's announcement that he had switched to Carter. In earlier interviews, Bratt had indicated he was leaning to Carter.

"I'm still for Jackson and when Jackson releases me I don't have to go for who he says," Bratt said. "I'll go for whoever I want. I'm not obligated to anybody."

Eagleton and other party leaders involved in the controversial endorsement of Carter that left a number of state delegates miffed at the way it was handled urged the convention to unite behind Carter in choosing the final 17 delegates because "nothing can be gained if we delay any longer."

But convention keynote speaker, retiring U.S. Rep. William Hungate of Troy, sounded a different theme even though he was among those calling for selection of Carter delegates last month.

"Diverse opinion is the secret of the Democratic party's strength," said Hungate. "Friends, we have already thrown away better candidates than the Republicans can find."

He predicted there would be different opinions up until the nominating convention, but then added, "When the convention is over let us remember that these are just family fights."

Indicating he felt it would be difficult to overcome Carter, Brown still said he would continue his campaign "for a little while longer until it doesn't make much sense to me."

Senate to vote on tax cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — With federal income-tax cuts due to expire July 1, the Senate begins voting this week on a massive tax bill that would extend the cuts.

The bill also would limit some of the tax-avoidance schemes available to the wealthy, and create some tax breaks while eliminating others.

The bill consists of up to 1,700 pages and requires a 500-page report to explain. Because of this size, there is growing doubt that Congress can complete action before July 1.

But there is virtually no chance that the lawmakers will allow taxes to go up on that date. Either the tax-cut portion of the bill will be split off and considered separately or the tax-cut extension will be made retroactive to July 1, no matter when it is passed.

If the anti-recession tax cuts enacted last year are allowed to expire, it would mean a $245 tax increase for a family of four earning $6,000 a year; a $204 hike for a couple earning $10,000; a $151 increase for a single person earning $10,000; and $180 for a typical four-member family earning $15,000.

While the Senate concentrates on taxes, the House will work on major appropriation bills this week.

Scheduled for a final House vote today was a bill to raise the national debt ceiling to $700 billion, an increase of $73 billion.

The biggest appropriation bill of all, $106 billion for defense, will be considered by the House on Thursday. Also on the agenda is a $9.5-billion appropriation for public works and $12.5-billion for agriculture programs.

Before beginning the tax debate, the Senate planned to vote today on a bill authorizing $6.7 billion in foreign military aid for the period ending Sept. 30, 1977. The bill also would give Congress greater control over U.S. arms sales abroad.

There is little disagreement between the House and Senate over extending the individual and corporate tax cuts enacted last year.

But the Senate Finance Committee version of the tax bill would be considerably more generous to businesses and wealthy investors than would the measure passed by the House.

Senate liberals are gearing up in an effort to rewrite the Finance Committee's bill to make it more like the House bill. They seek especially to limit the ability of investors to avoid taxation by offsetting such incomes as salaries against losses incurred in such shelters as movies, farming and real estate.

Bicentennial flag presented to Chaffee

CHAFFEE—The City received an American Bicentennial Flag in services Saturday, officially inaugurating Chaffee's Bicentennial program.

The flag raising was conducted by members of the Chaffee Veterans of Foreign Wars, post 3127.

Other participants in the ceremonies were: The Musical Patriots, a group of students from the Chaffee High School Band, who provided patriotic music; Chaffee Elks Lodge 1810 exalted ruler Larry G. Dooley, who along with Boy Scouts of Troop 54, presented a tribute to the flags of the nation. Group singing of the National Anthem was led by the Chaffee Girl Scouts.

Jack T. Burnett, chairman of the Chaffee Bicentennial Committee said that starting today, Flag Day, through July 4, the city will pay a 21-day tribute to the nation by flying the different flags of the country.

Reagan forces jubilant

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — "Shades of 1964." That was the way one Disappointed Republican described it after his fellow party members chose 18 of 19 available at-large delegates to support Ronald Reagan at the party's national convention.

The statement, which referred to the party's ill-advised selection 12 years ago of Sen. Barry Goldwater as the GOP standard bearer, came of course from a supporter of President Ford's candidacy.

Reagan forces, meanwhile, were jubilant. They had effectively organized themselves to turn back efforts by Gov. Christopher S. Bond and other party leaders who wanted Missouri to send overwhelming support for Ford to the national convention.

But the efficient organization along with Reagan's personal visit to the state convention in Springfield Saturday was enough, or as Reagan put it later in Los Angeles, "far, far more than we expected."

Only by a very narrow margin did Bond manage to be elected as the sole at-large delegate supporting Ford, and only that as a courtesy to the governor.

The state convention results and those from congressional district meetings gave Reagan a solid majority among Missouri's 49-member delegation to the August convention. The former California governor will have 30 delegates, Ford 16 and three go uncommitted.

But the delegate who compared Reagan with Goldwater was echoing a belief expressed by Bond and other Ford supporters: That with Reagan at the top of the ticket in November, the GOP is vulnerable in Missouri.

After the Missouri results, Reagan said electability will be the key issue in the remaining state conventions "because the other campaign has made that its issue."

"It is the thing that has to be countered—whether I was electable or not in November—and the Missouri convention rejected that," he said.

Generally, the former California governor's support came from the 8th District in central Missouri, the 7th in the southwestern part of the state, the 3rd in south St. Louis city and county and the 10th in south-east Missouri.

Hearnes claims he was axed by Tom Eagleton

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. (AP) — For the first time in six years, former Missouri Gov. Warren Hearnes is not a member of the Democratic National Committee.

Hearnes' re-election bid at the party's state convention here Saturday was defeated, largely through the efforts of Sen. Thomas Eagleton.

The senator and other party leaders had asked that Hearnes be excluded from the slate this year to avoid irritating Hearnes' opponents for the party nomination for the other Senate seat.

But state Sen. Robert Young, D-St. Ann, put the former governor's name in nomination for the national committeeman post, saying it was unfair to prevent Hearnes from keeping the job solely because he is a candidate for a public office.

Warren Hearnes

But instead of electing Hearnes, the convention instead elected a slate of committee

Tom Eagleton

members favored by Eagleton. After his defeat, the former governor was quoted as saying there is "a great amount of resentment of Eagleton's dictatorship of the party."

"I knew he was out to ax me," he said.

Eagleton replied that he was "not going to get into any kind of shouting match with Hearnes." He added that because Hearnes is running for the party nomination for the seat of retiring Sen. Stuart Symington, "I'd been led to believe he was not a candidate" for the party job.

Hearnes said, however, that he had been told that "the universal opinion in the party" was against placing any of the Senate candidates on the slate.

"But when I got here Friday night, I found out it was not the universal opinion, whatever that is," he said. "So I allowed my name to be placed in nomination."

Jackson motorist killed

Five traffic accidents in the Southeast Missouri over the weekend resulted in one death, moderate injuries to one person and minor injuries to three others.

Matthew Mason Green, 21, of Jackson was killed in a one-car accident at 9:25 p.m. Saturday on Highway 72, four miles west of Jackson.

The highway patrol reported the accident happened when Green, driving west at a high rate of speed, started to round a curve, lost control of his vehicle and struck a telephone pole.

He was pronounced dead at the scene and his body was taken to McCombs Funeral home in Jackson.

A one-vehicle accident at 4:30 p.m. Saturday, one mile east of Lake Wappapello on Route T, resulted in moderate injuries to a passenger, Raymond E. Davis, 26, of Zelma, who was taken to Veterans Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

The patrol said the car, driven by an unidentified person who left the scene on foot, ran off the right side of the road, struck the end of a culvert and continued several feet before coming to rest in a ditch.

A burning field and smoke was listed as the cause of a two-vehicle accident at 6:15 p.m. Sunday, three miles west of Broseley on a Butler county road.

Debra Ann Griffin, 18, of Broseley received minor injuries in the accident which occurred when Greg J. Carter, 13, of Quin, moved a pickup truck east from a burning field into the path of the Griffin auto, which was west bound. The Griffin woman was taken to Doctors Hospital in Poplar Bluff.

Speed was listed as the cause of a one-car accident at 6:55 p.m. Sunday on route KK, eight-tenths of a mile west of the

Perry-Bollinger County line.

The accident occurred when the driver, Michael Edward Schwent, 16, of Perryville Route One, traveling west at a high rate of speed, was unable to make a curve, causing the car to travel off the southside of the highway and overturn, coming to rest on the roof of the vehicle.

Schwent was taken to Perry County Memorial Hospital with minor injuries.

PRIMARY ROAD SIGNS

By Howard Flieger

Uncertainties of politics being what they are, it would be silly to try to read a November outcome into the voting patterns shown by the primaries so far.

But they do suggest a few trends that may be significant indicators of the future. Political practices honored by time have been taking a beating this year.

It could be that the American public — thinking ahead of the politicians, as usual — is signaling one of those sharp swings in attitudes about Government and those chosen to direct it that has marked the history of the United States from time to time.

Results of the primaries as a whole to date hint at a new direction.

A few examples —

The way things are going, voters in November are likely to have a choice between moderate-to-conservative candidates in both major parties for the first time in four decades, with no recognized and avowed liberal at the head of either ticket.

At this point, Jimmy Carter of Georgia is far out from among the Democrats. Although he hasn't been too specific, nothing in his campaign so far indicates that his views mesh with those of the Democratic liberals of the past.

The Republican contest lies between a moderate-conservative President, Gerald Ford, and an outspoken conservative, Ronald Reagan of California — with the outcome in doubt.

Candidates who have advocated bigger federal programs of the "New Deal" and "Great Society" varieties have fallen by the wayside — rejected by the voters. Democrat Morris K. Udall of Arizona, who still remains in the race, has proclaimed he is campaigning as a progressive because the designation "liberal" is out of date with the times.

Election returns of the primaries up to the moment no broad-based public support for "antibusiness" measures proposed in Congress, such as those that would break up the major oil companies and multinational firms.

In fact, both Democrat Jimmy Carter and Republican Ronald Reagan seem to be benefiting from an "Anti-Washington establishment" mood in the country. Each is a relative newcomer to national politics. Neither has ever served in any federal office. Both have progressed in the campaign by criticizing the size, activities and pervasiveness of the present Washington bureaucracy.

It is possible that a popular sentiment in the country is typified in this observation by a seasoned political observer:

"The people in both parties who have been running things in Washington for the past 25 years or so have made a mess of it, so why not let someone else have a chance?"

That is a modern application of the old "time for a change" theme that has marked American politics of all levels at turning points of the past.

Here are a couple of other things:

If Jimmy Carter is the Democratic nominee, it will be the first time that party has chosen a standard-bearer from the States of the Confederacy who did not move up from the Vice Presidency since James K. Polk of Tennessee in 1844. (Woodrow Wilson was born in Virginia, but went to the White House from the Governorship of New Jersey.)

If Gerald Ford fails to win nomination, it will be only the second time in the history of his party that Republicans have rejected an incumbent President. (It happened to Chester A. Arthur in 1884.)

This year, the character image projected by the presidential nominees may be more important than the issues — probably one reason there have been so few major policy speeches. This is called the "faith and confidence" factor.

As one pollster put it recently: "People are paying no attention to political promises, they are looking for someone they can trust."

DIAL-QUESTION FOR DEAF

On the subject of the telephone's 100th anniversary, it is fitting to note that one of the latest uses of this invention is of direct benefit to those who cannot hear. Alexander Graham Bell, we sometimes forget, was a teacher of the deaf.

International Correspondence Schools (ICS) recently inaugurated a "Dial-A-Question" service to enable its deaf students around the country to communicate directly with their instructors in Scranton, Pa.

The basis for the service is an acoustic telephone coupler — TTY — used in conjunction with a teletypewriter. The student sets his telephone receiver into the coupler, dials a toll-free number and types out his message, which is received on another teletypewriter at the other end. After the answer to his question is obtained, it is transmitted back over the same system.

Currently, there are more than 12,000 TTY stations throughout the U.S. and Canada, including hundreds available through organizations serving the deaf. Primary use of the TTY system has been for emergency communications. The ICS innovation is the first time it has been used on a national scale for educational purposes.

AMONTHOF PERFECT DAYS?

SO THIS IS June. Now if ever come perfect days, the poet tells us. Well, some perfect days, perhaps. But as we already have seen, it also can be a month of cool and rainy days. Be patient with them.

Before the 30 days are out the sun will be pushing the growth of soybeans and sunflowers and drawing up the early season moisture into long-stemmed grasses that need more frequent mowings.

No other month—not even December—enjoys greater popularity than June. It is the time kids get out of school and parents year for the pleasures of a vacation at the beach or maybe in a cool northern woods. It is a time for brides and the beginning of a profusion of blossoms from annual flowers. It is a time when we can expect to begin the first haying of the season, and perhaps enjoy an ice cream social at a country church.

Why is it called June? Some say it was named by the Romans in honor of Juno, goddess of the female of the species who was the great queen of the gods and the patron saint of marriage, geese and cuckoos.

But such things are not ever really certain. There are other historians who claim the month is named for the "juniores" because in early Roman times this season was dedicated especially to young men fated for matrimony.

Well, whatever its origin, it is a good month. Warm enough to be at least a solid promise of summer and yet only a preview of the swelter that lies ahead. Go swimming, swing a hammock between two stout trees and take a long nap, have a tall, cool drink. Enjoy it all while you can.

INTELLIGENCE BY THE NUMBERS

An intriguing new element has been added to the old controversy over nature vs. nurture, or heredity vs. environment:

Intelligence does not depend upon genetics or race or class or income but rather upon the number of children in a family and how closely or far apart they are spaced in age.

This is the theory of Michigan psychologist Robert B. Zajonc, who bases it chiefly on an analysis of the recent steady decline in Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scores of high school seniors—a decline which has aroused so much concern and disputation among parents and educators.

Zajonc found that the drop in SAT scores, which began about

12 years ago, was a direct reflection of the baby boom of the 1950s, when people began having more children and having them closer together. Comparisons of birth rates and standard IQ scores in other countries revealed the same phenomenon.

According to Zajonc's theory, a child's rate of mental development is influenced by the amount of adult knowledge available to him and grows more rapidly when parental knowledge is not "diluted" by the presence of other children.

For instance, using the figure of 30 as the intellectual level of each adult parent and zero for a new-born child, the mental quotient of the family is a total of 60 divided by three, or 20. But if a second child is born when the first child's level has reached, say, only about eight, the family's mental quotient drops to 17 (68 divided by four).

On the other hand, if a second child is not born until the first has reached near-adult level, the second child will benefit from a richer intellectual environment than an only child has.

Zajonc's theory not only explains the decline in SAT scores but differences in the IQ scores of white and black children. The average white family has fewer children and tends to space them farther apart. Black families are more likely to have their children close together, and also more black families are headed by only one parent.

On the same evidence, Jewish children tend to score disproportionately well on intelligence tests because they not only come from smaller families but ones where both parents are more likely to be present because of a low divorce rate.

The theory has engendered as much controversy as that over SAT scores, if only because it jars a lot of preconceptions and steps on a lot of vested educational and sociological interests. And as Zajonc himself admits, there are all kinds of exceptions, as well as other family values to consider. Benjamin Franklin, who was not exactly a dull boy, was the eighth of 10 children. There is also a certain arbitrariness in assigning each parent an equal intellectual level.

Nevertheless, the birth-rate-test score evidence remains compelling, and on the basis of it Zajonc predicts that SAT scores will halt their decline by 1980 and begin climbing again as a result of the falling birth rate that began in the early 1960s. Already, tests in some states show that children born in 1963 and who are now in junior high school are scoring better than children from the larger families of the 1950s.

Even if Zajonc's prediction comes true, however, it will not prove the validity of his theory. Just as any number of reasons have been offered for the decline in SATs—from too much television to too much permissiveness, from bad teaching to crowded classrooms—we can be sure that everybody is going to get into the act to explain or take credit for the turnaround in SAT scores if they do turn around.

JUSTICE DOESN'T NEED A GAG RULE

Where does the First Amendment right of a free press end and a defendant's right to a fair trial begin?

This is the central question involved in the alarming increase in the use of pretrial "gag" orders—alarming, certainly, to the journalism profession, which has carried the issue up to the highest level of the nation's judicial system.

The whole controversy, however, may be based on a misconception, thinks one jurist. It is a misconception indulged in not only by judges and prosecutors but fostered by journalists themselves, and that is the impact of news on the public at large.

Addressing the recent annual convention of the American Society of Newspaper Editors, William J. Bauer, judge of the U.S. Court of Appeals in Chicago, told the editors some things that were both unsettling and comforting.

"I suggest," he said, "that one of the things that you have fostered, because you have some such a superb job of reporting, editing and publishing, is to think that you really influence people. And that four days after they read the story, they remember the first thing about it."

But the fact that this judge discovered in trying highly publicized cases which had been in the headlines for weeks or months before the trial was that when prospective jurors were questioned, 94 per cent by actual count said they could not remember reading anything about the case.

The other six per cent remembered vaguely that they had read something about it, but only about one-half of one per cent remembered what they had read and less than half of these had made up their minds as a result of what they had read.

In other words, there is more than a little truth to the old saying that nothing is deader than yesterday's news. This may be less than inspirational to those who labor to bring today's news to the public, but it does serve to put the gag-rule controversy into better perspective.

THE FREEDOM FIGHTERS

Because they know it's impossible to defend a system which permits the firing of wage-earners for refusing to support an unwanted labor organization, union professionals dutifully avoid any direct confrontation with the moral implications of compulsory unionism.

One of their favorite ploys is to insinuate that the Right to Work movement is a plot of Big Business, thereby hoping to discredit those who place individual freedom above trade union power.

Meanwhile, compulsory unionism brings misery and suffering to hundreds, if not thousands, of Americans each year, and denies millions of Americans their basic Constitutional rights.

As evidence of just how phony the union bosses' claims are, I want to introduce just a few of the dozens of freedom fighters we were privileged to meet during a recent meeting in Washington.

Terry T. Campo is an American Studies major at Millikin University. While in high school Terry was an Illinois State Scholar, and a representative to the Illinois YMCA Youth Legislature, where he authored and successfully co-sponsored the Employees Freedom of Choice Act, a Right to Work bill. He is now pushing for enactment of a federal law which would exempt students from the forced unionism provisions of federal law.

Paul H. Robertson, who hails from Salt Lake City, and Carl A. Coates, from Rock Springs, Wyoming, are experienced journeymen electricians who were employed by the Bechtel Power Corporation at its Jim Bridger Power project in Wyoming. In December 1974, Bechtel reduced its work force and agreed to demand by officials of IBEW Local 322 that persons not hired through the union be laid-off first, regardless of experience or qualifications. Robertson and Coates were two of those whose jobs were taken away because they weren't union members.

Albert M. Holmquist was a teacher in the Madison, Wisconsin, school system in 1971, when a contract was being negotiated between the School Board and the teachers' union. During the "negotiations," Holmquist appeared at a public session of the School Board to present a petition signed by many of the teachers asking the Board to delay implementing a so-called "fair share" agreement, which required the forced payment of union dues. Union officials protested, and Wisconsin courts have ruled that Holmquist's exercise of his constitutional right of free speech was unlawful, since only the union was empowered by law to "represent" the views of Madison teachers. His case is on appeal to the U.S. Supreme Court.

A non-union construction equipment operator, Samuel Kirkland refused to leave his job when he was ordered to by union officials. His stubborn refusal to turn tail and run earned him a brutal beating when a group of union commandos attacked the Marco Island, Florida, job site where he was employed. The union assailants—five of whom were convicted and jailed—also threatened to cut off his arms. And all because he dared exercise his Right to Work without joining their union.

A classroom teacher in Vermilion, Ohio, Jo Ann Seker went before her state legislature to explain her views. "Allow us to make our own professional decisions, as an example to our students that this, their country and mine and yours, not only allows, but welcomes diversity of opinion, individual integrity, and freedom of choice."

This, my friends, is what Right to Work is all about. These are the real freedom fighters.

Punishing Moonlighting: Auto Workers Targeting Ford (Motors) For Historic Remaking of Nation's Work Week

NEW YORK — Absolutely, it didn't take any deep-throated source to convince me that the upcoming July 12 Democratic National Convention here will be shorter than Elizabeth Taylor's playstunt. Just look at the travel arrangements Jimmy Carter's man in labor, auto workers president Leonard Woodcock, is making for a quick departure to Detroit, so he can launch the second most significant domestic story of the year.

On Monday, July 19, he begins three successive days of presentation of UAW's 1976 demands to the Big Three car manufacturers. First up is General Motors; then Ford, and third Chrysler, USA. Basically these are uniform demands. Then each group breaks up into intense bargaining conferences—which could well wind up in a strike of one of the corporations over some special issue.

At first we insiders believed the big story would involve Chrysler, USA because its subsidiary, Chrysler United Kingdom, last August (though unpublished in America) had offered not only to place two British union chiefs on its board of directors but to open all its books, records, and policymaking procedures to the UK's union officialdom and rank and file all the way down the line.

Then it was revealed that UAW vice president Doug Fraser, leader of the U.S. Chrysler workers, would ask Chrysler USA for exactly what was offered by Chrysler UK to its employees. Fraser told me he'd accept the British Chrysler document, "typographical errors and all."

"What is good enough for Chrysler to offer the British workers is good enough for them to offer us," Fraser told me during a phone conversation.

In a few words, Chrysler's Aug. 7, 1975, "Employee Participation Programme" opens "all of its activities" to the British labor leadership.

This is the phenomenon of worker decision making development now enveloping much of the free world—especially Germany and Sweden where it's rolling into worker-ownership. Thus as it heats up here, it could become the searing breakthrough—especially since some scholars now believe there are enough billion-dollar worker pension funds to buy up control of much of American industry.

But there isn't much unanimity inside the $213.1 million UAW's high command over this issue. Labor solidarity, yes. Unity on becoming part of management, no.

To me, this portends a hotter issue elsewhere on the auto negotiating front. This union is powerful, what with a strike fund now topping $170 million and a per capita dues income of $118 million annually. So where it strikes for new breakthroughs it will make the big breaking news, presidential election or not.

For this some insiders look to the Ford Motor Co. arena.

Here you run into the veteran pile-driver UAW vice president Ken Bannon. He says he'd rather confront Henry Ford (who has publicly, angrily condemned German co-determination, or co-management) on a high wage-fringe package than on the concept of getting two UAW representatives on Ford's board of directors.

Mark well a new principle breakthrough Bannon has in mind. This could change the broad sweep of American industrial life just as the UAW's first pension retirement plans have. Back in 1949, the UAW broke through on this front with a contract calling for a meager $100 a month retirement pension. One had to be 30 years on the job to get it. And it included Social Security.

Today UAW contracts call for up to $1000 monthly retirement pay with Social Security included. But the miniature pension of 27 years ago carried with it three unprecedented prime principles: the pensions were noncontributory on the workers' part, meaning the company agreed to pay for all of it. The program was funded. And it was jointly administered. In the following decades, as auto went so went the nation.

Now Ken Bannon says: "We're looking for new principles to provide job security—spreading the work."

One way to assure this, says he, is to create a shorter work week beginning this year.

"We don't want any overtime. We are talking about shorter work time. Bonus time off. Give the workers more leisure."

"We must put a penalty on moonlighting. Otherwise it defeats our purpose of leisure activity. They must take it in lumps, not in pieces, etc. Or an hour here and there."

Bannon says the language can be written so that the auto workers don't sop up jobs in other industries and do get in their leisure time. He says there is a great new principle involved here. Perhaps a shortened work-week, work-month, mini-sabbaticals. It could start in almost any fashion. Just as did the 1949 $100-a-month pension. Or it could go to weeks-on and weeks-off.

And the old weeks schedule would be as rare as a barber pole.

Again remember, as auto goes so goes the nation's industry.

Washington Merry-Go-Round

More on Ray-Hays Daze

By JACK ANDERSON with LESS WHITTEN

WASHINGTON—There is more to the celebrated Wayne Hays-Elizabeth Ray affair than the bosomy blonde has revealed.

Sources close to the notorious pair say the strip-and-tell mistress was in love with Hays. It was primarily jealousy over his marriage to another woman, Pat Peak, that provoked Ray into baring her two-year affair with the powerful Ohio Congressman, the sources say.

Bitterly, she charged that Hays' advances had compelled her to consult a psychiatrist, that she was revulsed at having sexual relations with the 65-year-old Hays.

But her friends say she told them quite a different story. Although the relationship was an emotional roller-coaster ride for Ray, she spoke of the gruff Hays as an inwardly sensitive man for whom she felt a deep affection. She told friends, indeed, that Hays was the "best" lover she'd ever had.

After she burst her bombshell, we have learned, it almost wrecked Hays' marriage. For several days, his new bride refused to speak to him.

At first, the old curmudgeon turned his back on his Washington troubles and concentrated on saving his brief marriage. To spare his bride further anguish, he told friends, "I would put a bullet through my head." Added the broken Hays meaningfully: "And I've got the guts to do it."

We got the first inkling of the torrid Ray-Hays romance more than two years ago when Elizabeth Ray called our office in a hysterical crying fit. Between sobs, she blurted that she was about to lose her Capitol Hill job because she "would not go to bed with Wayne Hays."

Our associates Bob Owens and Jack Cloherty hurried up to Capitol Hill to see her. But by the time they reached her, she had changed her story. She wanted our reporters to forget about the call.

But that wasn't the last time we heard from Liz Ray. She called our office repeatedly. We found her erratic, unreliable and unpredictable. We concluded that her outburst against Hays had resulted from a lovers' quarrel, that her attitude toward him fluctuated with the status of their romance, and that the two of them were exploiting one another. But there was no way we could base a story, we decided, upon her statements.

She also boasted of relationships, we learned, of such prominent Washington figures as Senators Hubert Humphrey, D-Minn., Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., Mike Gravel, D-Alaska, and John Culver, D-Iowa.

In each case, she used Hays' name to reach the Senator on the phone. She would engage the Senator in an aimless conversation, then would keep calling back. Most of her calls were never returned.

Some of the Senators now believe she had a purpose for the calls. They suspect she tapped them in order to prove she had a speaking acquaintance with them. This now gives credibility to the paperback potboiler she began preparing a year ago.

Sources close to Hays say he tried to break off the relationship with the shapely blonde some time ago. He knew she was dating several other men and regarded her as too promiscuous. He was also afraid that she would disclose the affair if he ended it.

Shortly after his divorce, he had dinner with Ray at Washington's fashionable Paul Young's restaurant. He chided her for not working hard enough. Later, according to witnesses, she asked Hays why he wouldn't marry her. Once she left the table to go to the rest room, she sashayed across the restaurant, tossing her hips in an exhibition of what she herself calls her "Walk."

She stopped at another table to engage a prominent Washington lawyer in conversation. Hays gestured toward the scene and remarked to the others at his table: "That's why I can't marry her."

There were times, according to our sources, when the temperamental Ray would threaten to cause a scene in Hays' office unless he went out with her. The biggest blowout occurred after a heated argument

Not so happily ever after-

Former queen seeks citizenship again

WASHINGTON (AP) — As in a fairy tale, the beautiful American girl fell in love with a handsome prince, married him and went to live in his mountain kingdom. But they didn't live happily ever after.

The fairy tale became a nightmare for Hope Cooke Namgyal, the New York socialite who became queen of the Himalayan kingdom of Sikkim 11 years ago. Her problems still aren't over.

Mrs. Namgyal left Sikkim three years ago with her two children after her husband, Palden Thondup Namgyal, turned over most of his government administration to India following a revolt against his rule.

For the past year, the 35-year-old former queen has been trying to persuade Congress to restore her American citizenship. But the attempt has proven futile.

Several members of the House immigration, citizenship and international law subcommittee were offended that she voluntarily renounced her citizenship to marry the king.

As a result of their opposition, Congress refused to grant her full citizenship, instead passing a bill to give her permanent residency.

As a permanent resident, she will have to wait five years before becoming a citizen, but the congressional action does prevent her deportation to Sikkim.

The private relief bill, approved last month, has been sent to President Ford for his signature, expected this week.

Mrs. Namgyal, living in New York with her children, has refused to talk to reporters. But in a statement to Congress supporting her request for citizenship, she described her last days in Sikkim.

"Life became hell," she said, adding she feared for her children's lives.

The shy, soft-spoken American married the then crown prince of Sikkim, a mountain kingdom tucked between China and India, in 1963. She became gyalmo (queen) in 1965, at Namgyal's coronation as chogyal (king).

"By Sikkimese law, I had to give up my American citizenship," she said in the statement. But she also felt an obligation to show the Sikkimese she was not an 'American arm' in the Himalayas," she said.

At first, life was idyllic. She became deeply involved in Sikkimese life, working to improve the educational system and to encourage the export of handicrafts. She gave birth to a son in 1964 and a daughter in 1968.

"To live in Sikkim was to be part of a wonderfully woven group — everyone shared and participated," she said. "The palace, which was small, was open to anyone who came. And people did come freely all the time — to sit, talk, eat and simply be together."

But in April 1973, a revolt began with a feud between the king and a wealthy landlord who had campaigned for reduction of the monarch's powers and had widespread support. The people resented the queen's 'American background.'

"Day by day, life deteriorated from 1973 on," she said. "My children, who had once run through town and countryside free as urchins were suddenly faced with ongoing physical danger."

Before his wife left the country, the king turned over most of the internal administration to the Indian government. In April 1975, he was deposed, and he remains under house arrest. Sikkim has been annexed as a state of India.

By living in the United States, Mrs. Namgyal said, she hoped to "make a small, durable life for myself and children and to reestablish in them some measure of hope, confidence and idealism."

Although she said that giving up her citizenship had been "one of my greatest sacrifices," the House immigration subcommittee, which deals with private citizenship bills, felt that didn't make any difference.

"The committee had problems with someone who had renounced her citizenship," said a subcommittee staff member. "Citizenship is something you don't renounce and then hope to get handed back automatically."

Recycle draperies with bright ribbon

By Polly Cramer

Polly's Problem

DEAR POLLY — When we bought our house two years ago, expensive plain dark blue draperies were hanging at the picture windows. I am tired of looking at them and would like to brighten the room, but cannot afford new draperies. Any suggestions as to what I might do. —RENEE

DEAR RENEE — You might add one and a half inch bands (or even wider) of fabric in a contrasting color that looks well in the room down the inside edges (about an inch in from the edges) and across the bottoms (along top of the hems). That would give the room a lift. Even three rows of grossgrain ribbon in different colors and slightly separated would look well applied the same way. Any decorative braid or short fringe could also be used. Do be sure what you use is really going to show and add color. —POLLY.

DEAR POLLY — We recently moved into a new home. Prior to moving, when I took down the pictures on the walls, I scotch taped the hooks to the backs of the pictures that hung on them. This saved a lot of time and looking around when I was ready to rehang the pictures in our new home. —MRS. A.J.L.

Also, I am peeved with the flimsy paper used to make vacuum cleaner bags. It just does not last. —D.L.T.

Foliage flourishes with tender care

by Charles Marden Fitch
Tropical jungles are famous for tangles of lush foliage, twining vines, an abundant display in many shades of green. Our homes are often decorated with species from humid tropical habitats, but with a reduced resplendence. You can increase the health and attractiveness of your foliage plants by recalling what occurs in their original tropical homes.

Almost every day some rain falls. During my last trip through the Amazon jungles of Colombia, Peru, and Brazil I found many philodendrons, bromeliads, marantas, and forest floor foliage favorites washed to glossy perfection by warm daily rains. Even during the dry season there is enough rainfall to keep foliage clean, in habitats that favor foliage plant species.

In my home the plant collection ferns, philodendrons, even fuzzy-leaved episcias are kept lovely by a monthly shower of lukewarm water. I bring plants to the bathroom sink and use a sprinkler for quick cleaning. After an hour or so, the foliage dries and I place plants in their decorative positions around the house.

Leaves on greenhouse or tile floored sunroom plants are even easier to keep clean. Just have a hot-cold water mixer attached to the hose line so water comes out lukewarm. With no danger from overly hot or cold water you can mist and sprinkle leaves every sunny morning.

Just be sure foliage has time to dry before nighttime, to discourage fungus attacks.

Diffuse light, humidity 40 to 60 per cent, and a temperature between 65 and 75 degree F are suitable conditions for the popular foliage plants. As with flowering plants it is best to have night temperatures 8 to 10 degrees cooler than daytime highs. Grow plants in well drained containers with one of the custom formulated houseplant mixes that comes pasteurized. For display you can always place drained containers inside of decorative solid bottomed pots but use care that water doesn't accumulate round the roots.

Summer air conditioning won't harm foliage so long as cold air doesn't blow directly at the plants, and humidity remains 40 percent or higher.

Even with the perfect environment, plants still need fertilizer for complete health. To produce the best leaves, adequate nitrogen is especially important. I like a general purpose timed released product which releases nutrients with every watering, for up to four months. During the peak growing season I supplement the slow release formula with a weak dilution of fish emulsion (5-1-1), an organic fertilizer high in nitrogen. Dilute fish emulsion in warm water, spray on the leaves or pour around the roots.

Printer sets sail for Italy

BOSTON AP — An Italian-born printer who refused to let his dream boat turn into a nightmare, was on the high seas today, enroute to fulfill a lifelong dream to sail back to his homeland.

"Something like this happens only once in a lifetime," said Andrea Pertot, 54-year-old Revere printer. He set sail Saturday in the 44-foot ketch he laboriously spent nine years building.

A squadron of well-wishers escorted the two-masted vessel out of Boston Harbor. Aboard were Pertot and his three crew members.

"Today is my day, the proudest moment of my life," Pertot said. Two years ago he had the ketch almost completed, but vandals broke in, set it afire, and destroyed the cabin area.

But, Pertot said then, "It has become a part of my life. I can't quit on her now." And he doggedly went back to rebuild the boat he named for his wife, Gloria.

I don't mind Ed doing crosswords when we go to a restaurant for dinner by ourselves because I enjoy them, too. But when we have another couple or two along, I'm embarrassed. There I sit, trying to converse with our guests (or hosts) while Ed has his nose buried in his newspaper, avidly filling in words.

If anyone mentions it, Ed says he can concentrate on more than one thing at a time and that he hasn't missed a word of the conversation. Occasionally he looks up to ask if anyone knows a five-letter word for an African nit. What do you have to say about such crude and insensitive behavior? — Puzzled In Pawtucket

Dear P.: Tell Ed a crossword is O.K. when he's alone or with you, but when others are present "Paw" should tuck it in his pocket.

It's insulting to give friends the impression that their company is so inadequate that he needs outside entertainment to protect himself against boredom.

Dear Ann Landers: My parents were from the old school and believed an unmarried woman who didn't live at home was "up to no good."

I am 31, single and lived with my parents until I was 29. After three years of hassling and much soul-searching I moved to my own apartment. My parents were very upset but I made the break anyway. Mother finally accepted it and even helped set up my apartment. But Father never let me forget I went against his wishes.

Mom passed away in January. I invited my father to stay with me "for a few weeks." Well, it's been three months now and all I hear from him is, "Move back home and live with me."

The thought of it makes me sick. I've become accustomed to coming and going as I please. The guilt feelings are enormous but it took so long to win my independence I hate to give it up.

Help me, Ann. I need your advice. — Truly Torn

Dear Torn: If you don't hold your ground now you'll be stuck in your father's home as long as he lives. You have earned your freedom and independence. I urge you to MAINTAIN IT or you'll rue the day.

Dear Ann Landers: In a recent column you had a letter from a woman who was terribly annoyed by a close friend who habitually telephoned her while she was eating. This friend was always crunching, chewing (sounded like celery) and as barely able to make herself understood because her mouth was full of food.

I have a similar problem. It's my husband. He insists on taking the phone to the dinner table and making business calls throughout the meal. Dinner time is actually the only opportunity the children have to talk to their father. I'm sure they resent his blocking them out, and so do I.

I've told him how I feel but he continues with this despicable habit. Last night he put it bluntly, "You run the house and let me run my business." What can I do about it? — Blocked Out

Dear Blocked: Probably very little — except to engage the children in conversation and try to divert their attention from the ultimate rejection.

A man who can't spare 25 minutes a day to converse with his children is in bigger trouble than he realizes. In a few years he should not be surprised when they have absolutely nothing to say to him.

There is a big difference between cold and cool. Ann Landers shows you how to play it cool without freezing people out in her booklet, "Teenage Sex — Ten Ways to Cool It." Send 50 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope to Ann Landers, P. O. Box 1400, Elgin, Ill. 60120.

WANTED: Pitchers who can throw strikes consistently with velocity and location enough to at least slow down the rampaging Bi-State League batters when they play the Sikeston Saints. Contact anyone connected with the team.

It happened again to the snake-bitten newest member of the Bi-State League on Sunday. The Sikeston Saints traveled to Ste. Genevieve, winless in league games, and lost. No. make that got stomped, 13-5.

"We weren't very fair to Jethro," said manager Tom Masterson after the game. "He didn't get any warning and wasn't prepared."

Starting hurler Jeff "Jethro" Jackson hadn't thrown in more than three weeks and was understandably wild and easy to hit when he was forced to be a last-minute replacement for scheduled starter Mike Cooksey.

Cooksey, a resident of Dexter, never showed for the departure of the team Sunday morning and that put the Sikeston team in dire straits.

Operating with a "now you pitch" philosophy, the Sikeston coaches were forced to sit through a three-and-a-half hour, 13 walk and 14 hits marathon that never gave the Sikeston hitters a chance.

"We've scored 36 runs in six games," noted a team member. "That ought to be enough to win more than once."

But, a 1-5 record is just what the struggling team has after Sunday's debacle.

Collegiate players Grant Dambach and Rick Eisenbach joined the lineup for a full game for the first time and both played well. Eisenbach was 3-for-4 with a long homer and two rbi's. Dambach hit the ball extremely well despite going on-for-5. He was, however, the middleman on a lightning-quick, 6-4-3 doubleplay in the second inning and lent a steadiness to the Sikeston infield that led Masterson to enthuse, "Our infield is as good as any we've seen this year."

Sikeston reached Ste. Genevieve starter Dan Beastings and his reliever Del

Chase for ten hits and five runs during the game. Leftfielder Kenny Urhnah collected two hits, as did first-time catcher Mitch Walker. Stan Hall belted a double.

"We've just gotta find a pitcher somewhere," moaned the Saints' manager after the game, citing the team's obvious and most pressing problem. "It can't just be anybody, because these Bi-State batters are extra-tough."

The Saints manager stressed that he wasn't meaning to cut down or criticize the hurlers that have worked for the team this year, but 52 walks and 64 runs in six games bear out his team's pressing need.

"We still feel our eight starters, and our bench, are as good as anybody's. If we find a consistent hurler or two, look out. Those playoffs still aren't out of reach."

The Saints next game is a home encounter Wednesday night at 7 p.m. in V.F.W. Stadium against the St. Louis Saints, a travelling team of excellent college players from the metro area.

NBA considers ABA's request for expansion

HYANNIS, Mass. (AP) — National Basketball Association owners were pondering today whether to admit four, five, six — or no — American Basketball Association teams for the 1976-77 season.

In an attempt to end pro basketball's costly war that has existed since the formation of the ABA in 1967, the NBA's top brass, headed by Commissioner Larry O'Brien, invited the younger league's leaders, including Commissioner Dave DeBusschere, to their annual summer meeting.

Under the four-team package, the NBA would take in Denver, Indiana, New York and San Antonio. If the five-team plan was accepted, Utah would be the added club. And should the NBA decide to increase its membership from 18 teams to 24, then Kentucky would be the other club.

That would mean the entire ABA — or what was left from the league which began with 10 franchises last season — would join the NBA, giving the 30-year-old league its largest enrollment in history.

O'Brien and his five-man merger committee were studying all aspects of the complicated plans today before submitting their suggestions to the 18-man Board of Governors for a vote. The decision was expected to be announced Tuesday, with 14 votes needed for passage.

"There are so many facets to the plans," said Mike Burke, president of the New York Knicks and a member of the merger committee. "The issues are players, politics, financial, legal and competitive, and they are so intertwined that none of the plans can be approached in a simplistic manner."

Ironically, it is the ABA which has submitted the plans, and it is the ABA's Players Association which could block some aspects of them.

The players' group would fight back, however, only if all six ABA teams were not included in the so-called merger agreement.

If four teams were accepted, each would be charged an initial fee of $4.5 million to be paid over five years.

Royals' trade for Ken Holtzman falls through

KANSAS CITY (AP) — You can add Ken Holtzman to the list of pitchers who are not coming to the Kansas City Royals.

The Royals said late Sunday that they had ended trade talks with the Baltimore Orioles concerning Holtzman because of an inability to sign him.

The announcement came after Kansas City General Manager Joe Burke discussed an agreement with the Orioles in which Holtzman would join the Royals — but only if he signed a contract.

"Joe talked to the Orioles, he talked to Holtzman's manager and he talked to Holtzman," said Dean Vogelara, a Royals spokesman. "But no agreement was reached and the deal fell through. There will be no trade for Holtzman."

Burke, who earlier expressed confidence that the trade would be made, explained that negotiations had broken down in areas other than financial terms or contract length.

"In the interest of harmony on our club, I could not agree to some of his requests," Burke said.

Holtzman was the fourth front-line pitcher Kansas City had shown interest in since late 1974 — and the fourth who failed to come to the Royals.

Kansas City reportedly made a multi-million dollar offer to Jim "Catfish" Hunter before he signed with the New York Yankees as a free agent in December 1974. The Royals also made inquiries about free agent Andy Messersmith, who signed with the Atlanta Braves this spring, and Bert Blyleven, who was traded to the Texas Rangers by the Minnesota Twins earlier this month.

Rumors of a Baltimore-Kansas City swap began here early Sunday after Holtzman was yanked from a scheduled start against the Royals and the Orioles said he would be traded to an unnamed American League team.

Prepare for Coaches All-America game

LUBBOCK, Tex. (AP) — Praise was abundant from both sides Sunday after coaches for the East and West squads in the Coaches All-America football game ran their players through workouts in preparation for the Saturday game.

West Coach Frank Kush of Arizona State said he put in eight running and six passing plays. "Everyone seemed to pick things up real well," Kush said. "Our quarterbacks looked good throwing the ball and we've got some super receivers in Henry Marshall of Missouri and 'T' Bell of Arizona. Marshall went to the ball real well and both of them looked good on the reverse," Kush said.

George Welsh, head coach at Navy and coach of the East squad, was equally impressed.

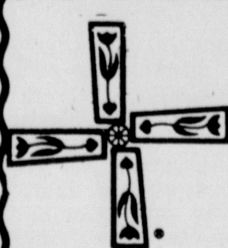

"We've got some great football players on our squad," Welsh said. "Our quarterbacks, especially, are the right kind of players for an all-star game. Both of them (Mike Kruczek of Boston College and Parnell Dickinson of Mississippi Valley) are excellent passers and very quick."

A crowd of more than 30,000 is expected for the nationally televised night contest.

Tyson's bat helps Cardinals salvage split with Cincinnati

CINCINNATI (AP) — Joe Morgan says Mel Ott's 47-year-old National League RBI record is safe—for the moment.

"It's not a once-in-a-lifetime chance," said Morgan after the St. Louis Cardinals halted his runs batted in binge at 10 games, one short of Ott's record.

"I'm not disappointed. How can I be? With this club, however the season is over I'll get another chance," said Morgan.

Morgan's bid highlighted Sunday's doubleheader split between the Cincinnati Reds and the Cardinals before a sweltering near-capacity crowd of more than 51,000.

St. Louis, after being shut out 4-0 in the opener, bounced back to take the nightcap 12-9 as light-hitting Don Kessinger drove in three runs, including two with his first home run in two years.

Morgan extended his RBI string to 10 straight games in the opener with bases-loaded walk while appearing as a pinch hitter.

Bob Forsch, Mike Wallace and Bill Greif combined to hold Morgan hitless in the second game. Morgan had one last chance in the ninth, with Pete Rose at second, but passed up a high, inside pitch for ball four.

Morgan spurned the pitch, saying "I would not do anything to hurt the team." Tony Perez followed with a three-run homer, but the rally came too late for the Reds, who trailed 12-1 at one point.

Morgan, who drove in 17 runs during the 10-game skein, took dead aim at the record earlier. On two occasions he led off an inning and was going for the fences.

"I was trying to jerk one out. That's probably why I didn't get a hit," he said.

Hits were no problem for the Cards in the nightcap.

They raked rookie Santo Alcala and three Cincinnati relievers for 15 safeties, including two-run homers by Kessinger and Lou Brock. Mike Tyson slammed two triples and a double to cap what he called "my best series against Cincinnati."

He had seven hits in 15 at-bats, with six going for extra bases.

"We were overdue. We've been hitting, but we just can't score any runs," said Tyson.

"Maybe our bats are coming around," added Kessinger, whose home run came on a hit-

and-run play. "We got 24 runs in four games here and we were shut out in one of them."

St. Louis Manager Red Schoendienst saw the four-game split as a good omen. "If we can keep the same lineup healthy—with Reggie Smith at first and Ted Simmons catching—we'll be all right."

Fred Norman and Will McEnany combined for an eight-hitter in the opener while Bob Bailey supplied the power. Subbing at third for Rose, Bailey drilled a two-run homer to help Fred Norman, 4-1, run his lifetime mark at Riverfront Stadium to 27-6. John Curtis, 4-6, took the loss.

Arizona St. & E. Michigan are unbeaten

By DAN EVEN

Associated Press Writer

OMAHA, Neb. (AP) — Arizona and Arizona State are living up to their billing in the 30th College World Series.

After three days of the eight-team, double-elimination tournament top-ranked Arizona State and Eastern Michigan are the only unbeaten — and looming in the wings is Arizona.

"I think it's becoming clear there is a separation between the top teams and the rest," said Arizona State Coach Jim Brock after his club knocked off Washington State 9-3 Sunday night.

Brock surely numbers his club in that elite — and although he didn't say it — the only other might be Arizona.

The Sun Devils' victory sent them into a Tuesday night matchup with pitching-rich Eastern Michigan, which advanced by nipping Clemson 3-2 in 10 innings.

Monday night is for survivors in the week-long tournament. Arizona, which came to the series ranked as the Sun Devils' top challenger, is matched against Clemson, 36-14, while Maine, 28-8, tangles with Washington State, 43-14.

"Our margin for error is zero and we're going to play like that the rest of the way," said Arizona Coach Jerry Kindall after his team stayed in the field by ripping Oklahoma 10-2 in a losers' round game.

One more victory probably will earn Arizona, 52-17, another shot at Arizona State. The Sun Devils took a come-from-behind 7-6 victory in 10 innings in their first series matchup with Arizona Saturday night.

"There's a good chance that it could be an all Arizona wrap-up," speculated Brock in looking ahead and seemingly not too worried about Eastern Michigan.

"They (Eastern) have a super pitcher in Bob Owchinko and Bob Welch isn't far from that," said Brock. "They nip away at you like they did Clemson and I'm sure they are a better hitting team than they showed."

Eastern Michigan, 45-14, used Jerry Keller's 10th inning single to edge Clemson after the Tigers had tied the score in the ninth on a two-out, two-strike double by Billy Wingo.

"We played our type of game — good pitching, good defense and good fundamental baseball," said Eastern Coach Ron Oestrike.

Eastern had only six hits — all singles — and all of its runs were scored on set up by bunts. Arizona State, 64-8, was a contrast in winning its 21 straight.

Stanfield, Satterfield win feature races

Larry Stanfield of Cape Girardeau and James Satterfield of Sikeston were the feature winners last Saturday night as racing continued at Sikeston Speedway.

Stanfield, who won the consolation heat Saturday night, edged out Gary Holshouser of Marion, Ill., who had placed third in the opening heat.

Rod Holshouser, also of Marion, won the opening heat in the B car competition. Joe Reddix, who was second in both the opening and consolation heats, finished third in the feature. Peanuts Campbell of Perryville took third in the consolation heat and fourth in the feature.

Satterfield finished second in the third heat in the late model competition, then beat out fellow Sikestonian Wayne Burch to win the feature. In the opening heat, Kenny Fortner of Sikeston won over a pair of Poplar Bluff drivers, Dale Telly and Tom Sample.

Fisk's Bill Adson, who took fifth in the feature, placed first in the second heat. Don Rushing of Malden was second and Earl Moore of Sikeston grabbed third.

Sikeston's Charlie Todd, third place finisher in the feature race won the third heat. Satterfield took second and Terry Johnson third.

Next Saturday night's action will include a special women's race in between the B car and late model competition.

Still in political style

... babies can be a candidate's best friends when a photographer is around — providing they're in the mood to cooperate. Democrat Jimmy Carter's handful seems to have some independent thoughts about their encounter.

And then there's Alabama's Gov. George Wallace, whose well-known ability to hold crowds spellbound doesn't impress this nonvoting citizen.

But never underestimate the power of a woman's touch, as demonstrated by Rosalynn Carter and her contented lapful.

If Dad's a Good Sport His Tie May Show It

A TOPICAL TIE, in this case rowboats and oars in a neat club pattern, can always be found to fit into Dad's interests. The light vest against a gingham patterned shirt is definitely fashionable this year. (From the Men's Tie Foundation.)

NEW YORK (AP) — Whatever the trendy fashion of the moment may be, there is one consistent staple — a man's tie. It reflects his personality, his state of mind, even his profession, and in a manner of speaking his life style, says the head of a tie manufacturing company.

The selection of a man's tie is often dictated by his profession, and just as often by his hobbies — especially if he is a sports buff. The latter might flaunt his sportsmanship by wearing a tie depicting his hobby — tennis, golf, baseball and such, D. Gordon Williams points out.

Doctors, lawyers, executives, stockbrokers and the like tend towards understated patterns and colors. Stripes are the most popular choice, though this does not preclude panels, borders, and under-the-knot-pattern ties for those who like to "dress up" to their profession, according to Williams.

News in brief

WASHINGTON (AP) — The programs the Democratic party is proposing on welfare, national health insurance and education can be financed without additional cost to the taxpayer if the nation returns to full employment, party officials say. The party is making full employment the central issue in the campaign platform that its 153-member platform committee was taking up today. A 15-member subcommittee completed work on a proposed draft Sunday.

WASHINGTON (AP) — Neither Democrats nor Republicans have improved their procedures for selecting vice presidential candidates and both parties fail to give the issue enough consideration, Harvard University's Institute of Politics says. "As it is now, both parties treat vice presidential selection as a low-priority matter, an afterthought unworthy of serious preparation."

WASHINGTON (AP) — A new study reports that American consumers find something wrong with more than one out of every four articles or services they purchase, but most of the time they don't complain to the seller. The report was released Sunday by Ralph Nader's Center for Study of Responsive Law and Call for Action Inc., a consumer group. It was based on interviews conducted last year in 34 cities.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal government is encouraging CB radio operators to organize a nationwide network of highway safety broadcasters. Sponsors of the program think CBers in emergencies might want to find "smokies" rather than avoid them. The program is being financed by the Transportation Department's National Highway Traffic Safety Administration.

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI says it had two contacts with Jacques Srouji, a Nashville journalist, shortly before she testified before a House subcommittee investigating nuclear security, according to a well informed source. The FBI is reportedly under investigation by a special Justice Department team looking into the possibility that the bureau attempted to use Mrs. Srouji to manipulate the congressional probe.

WASHINGTON (AP) — With federal income-tax cuts due to expire July 1, the Senate begins voting this week on a massive tax bill that would extend the cuts. The bill also would limit some of the tax-avoidance schemes available to the wealthy and create some tax breaks while eliminating others.

CANTERBURY, Conn. (AP) — A cross-country grave-digging expedition led by a parolee convicted of a sex crime has unearthed another body, the fourth person the man claims to have sexually molested and slain. Authorities said the body of a 21-year-old woman was found Sunday in a grave near a lovers' lane after Robert F. Carr III pointed out the spot. Police said Carr, flown here from Florida where he'd been arrested, was not present during the digging. Authorities there said Carr has told of killing a teen-age girl, two youngsters and the woman here. Last week, he led authorities to graves of a 16-year-old girl and two 11-year-old boys in Louisiana and Mississippi, all from the Miami area.

The members would be elected from the traditional Colorado and Blanco political parties and from the labor unions. Demicheli, 80, was vice president until the leaders of the armed forces ousted President Juan M. Bordaberry in a bloodless coup.
